ECONOMY KEYNOTE VOICED BY CHRISTIANSON

CONCENTRATES HIS PLATFORM IN A SENTENCE

TO REDUCE TAX LEVY UNTIL NO DIRECT LEVY FOR STATE REVENUE FUND

CREATING NO NEW OBLIGATIONS, DISCHARGING OBLIGATIONS ALREADY CREATED

Fergus Falls, Minn., Sept. 29. —(UP)—With his keynote of "economy" heard by thousands here Tuesday night, Governor Theodore Christianson made ready today to carry his campaign for re-election on the republican ticket to every corner of the state during the next month.

Governor Christianson will divide his time until the general election on November 2 between St. Paul and points he will touch on his speaking tour. His first objective is a trip through the seventh district.

Second of the candidates for governor to swing into action, Governor Christianson concentrated his platform into the following sentence:

Reducing the tax levy until ultimately there shall be no direct levy for the state revenue fund.

Creating no new obligations and discharging all obligations heretofore created as soon as may be.

Safeguarding and increasing the state's trust funds.

The governor reviewed the achievements of his administration during the past two years and declared he has kept his promise that "if I were elected" the power of the governor's office would be used to check the mounting cost of government."

In citing how the economies had been brought about, Governor Christianson reiterated what he told voters during the primary, that $2,000,000 appropriation had been killed, a budget plan adopted in connection with reorganization of the state government, supplies purchasing to obtain advantage of bulk prices, centralization of responsibility and personnel of several departments and abolition of others and stoppage of "leaks" which have accounted for thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money.

The governor declared he would not give his consent to any increase in the 1927 total appropriations and to any measure increasing the state's bonded indebtedness.

The keynote attracted such a huge gathering from the communities of the seventh district and many of the ninth district that all who wished to hear the governor could not do so. From the time of his arrival he was tendered an ovation. Thousands greeted him as his train reached Fergus Falls.

C. C. Selvig, of Crookston, candidate for congressman from the ninth district, opened his campaign at the same meeting and declared that voters of the district would come back into the republican fold.

Freeport, Ill., Sept. 29—(UP)—An insurgent group of the Mystic Workers Fraternal Insurance Society today fifiled suit in federal court here asking directors and officers for an accounting of $1,000,000 expended for field work and commissions.

The "regulars" of the society are holding their convention in Madison Wis., this week.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 29—(UP)—Turmoil marked the session of the Mystic Workers Convention here today when the Class A Relief Society, an insurgent group fighting the recent increase of the organization's insurance rates, questioned the report of the credentials committee.

Election of officers is scheduled for late today, with both of the factions having its ticket upon the ballot.

TEAPOT DOME NAVAL RESERVE LEASE TO COURT

HARRY F. SINCLAIR INTERESTS TO APPEAL TO U. S. SUPREME COURT

ST. LOUIS VERDICT CANCELLING LEASE IS CONTESTED BY THE SINCLAIRS

Washington, Sept. 29.—(UP) —The Harry F. Sinclair interests will take to the United States supreme court an appeal from the St. Louis verdct cancelling the noted Teapot Dome naval reserve lease, George P. Hoover, Sinclair counsel, announced today.

With this appeal, the nation's highest court will have before it both civil suits arising from the senate's sensational oil lease probe.

Arguments are set for next week before the court on appeal of E. L. Doheny, oil magnate, from lower court decision, nullifying the Elk Hills, Cal., reserve lease granted by ex-Secretary of Interior A. B. Fall, who also granted the Teapot Dome lease to Sinclair.

Criminal cases against Sinclair, Fall and Doheny still pend in the District of Columbia courts.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 29.—An accounting of all oil and petroleum products taken from the government's naval oil reserve at Teapot Dome must be made by the Mammoth Oil Company, according to a decision of the United States district court of appeals which reversed and remanded the decision of the lower court at Cheyenne, Wyo.

The appellate court's decision, returned by Judge William S. Kenyon, and concurred in by Judge W. A. Cant of Duluth, and Judge A. S. Valkenburgh of Kansas City, virtually cancels the Teapot Dome oil lease, obtained by Harry F. Sinclair and his associates while Albert B. Fall was secretary of the interior.

The decision, returned late yesterday, stated that "the entire transaction is tainted with favoritism, collusion and corruption, defeating the proper and lawful functions of the government."

Benson, Minn., Sept. 29.—(UP)—F. C. Thornton, president of the Swift State bank of Swift Falls, which has been closed, will be tried during the November term of district court on a charge of grand larceny.

Thornton was given a preliminary hearing Tuesday and then bound over. Bond was fixed at $10,000.

It was testified that Thornton signed two notes aggregating $1,850, signed by the Mission Creek Timber company and countersigned by him as "attorney in fact" which position it was charged was not his.

43 MINERS FOUND ALIVE

RESCUE TO BE COMPLETED IN A FEW HOURS

Ironwood, Mich., Sept. 29.—(UP)—All 43 of the miners entombed in the G. Pabst mine of the Oliver Mining company are alive, company officials announced this afternoon.

A statement by J. C. Barrett of the Oliver Mining company, said that "the men are all alive and their rescue will be completed within a few hours." Barrett said that members of the rescue party had talked to the miners.

Barrett said that all 43 of the men are on the eighth level of the mine, that they reported they were suffering from hunger but said all were alive.

Rescue of the men came after they had been imprisoned 780 feet below the surface following a cave-in Friday which blocked the only method of egress through the Pabst shaft and defied workers for almost 124 hours.

Ambulances, physicians and nurses waited at the entrance of the mine for the men to be brought up. Removing them, it was said, will take several hours.

Communication with the miners was established shortly after noon today through the shaft that collapsed in the cave-in.

Workmen who have been tunneling upward from the 26th level since Sunday reached the 20th level and discovered that the shaft was clear at this point. While it was being strengthened so that the progress upward could be continued, voices were heard from above.

"The men stated they were alive—every one of them—and were in fairly good condition," said the official statement.

Those on the eighth level included three mine inspectors who were believed to have been further down.

Relatives and friends of the entombed men broke through the ropes that have held them back from the mine entrances and packed around the entry, drooping spirits revived and causing scenes of indescribable joy.

"They're alive, they're alive," was the word that spread quickly through Ironwood and brought hundreds of additional persons to the scene.

From the other three operations that were being carried on came scores of rescue workers, each eager to be one of the party that was sent down to overcome the remaining obstacles and make it safe for the men to be brought out.

The men will be removed by a circuitous path, first being lowered to the twentieth level through the regular shaft, then to the 26th level and from there over and up the "G" shaft.

Ironwood, Mich., Sept. 29.—(UP) —With no additional signals from below for 24 hours, rescue workers pushed forward today in the hope that they may reach some of the 42 men imprisoned in the G. Pabst mine before nightfall.

The rescue has become a grim struggle which death already may have won. Human ingenuity has done its utmost, but it is a slow ordeal to overcome the resistance of the walls of rock which hold the miners imprisoned and many precious hours had been lost in changing tactics or abandoning work already started.

Somewhere 780 feet below the surface are 40 of the miners, known to be without food, their carbide lamps long since burned out, their water supply perhaps only what seeps through the rocks and pure air uncertain.

Still another 500 beneath them are either two or three other miners, whose circumstances are identical, but who may be the first to be reached.

There are some who cling to the hope that the men are alive. Faint tappings sounded on the air pipes early Tuesday, but whether they were sounds made by the rescue crews have not been determined and since the noises have not recurred.

Even the women at the mine mouth are losing hope. As late as Tuesday, they welcomed every scrap of information from the rescuers, but now, as the shifts change at half hour intervals they are silent and sad.

It is possible the rock prisons may be reached today, but no one can speak with certainty. The best progress has been made in working upward from the 26th level where two of the miners are known to have been working. The crew engaged in this attempt has had less obstacles than any other.

The shaft that is expected to be the first to reach the 40 men on the eighth level is being driven at an angle from the Aurora mine adjoining. The entire distance is about 280 feet and it is estimated half of that has been conquered.

One of two other attempts at tunneling met with a slow start. It is the 2½ inch hole that a diamond drill is tearing into the ground to provide a channel for communicating with the men on the eighth level and passing down concentrated food. This operation is speedy, but it got a late start.

The other work is the clearing of the shaft, which was blocked by the cavein Friday. Retimbering is necessary to protect the rescue workers

PROSECUTION REVERSES IN HEARING HELD

CONSPIRACY CHARGE HEARING OF MRS. AIMEE SEMPLE McPHERSON

STATE SUMMONS CARPENTER ALLEGED TO HAVE WITNESSED AMOROUS SCENES

By LINCOLN QUARBERG
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Los Angeles, Sept. 29.—A carpenter, John Considine, was called today by District Attorney Asa Keyes in an attempt to turn the tide of prosecution reverses in conspiracy hearing of Mrs. Aimee Sempel McPherson, noted evangelist.

Considine is said to have witnessed many amorous scenes at the Carmel by the Sea "love nest" where the state believes Mrs. McPherson visited during her mysterious disappearance. It will be the third day of the hearing for Mrs. McPherson, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman Seilaf, Kenneth G. Ormiston and "John Doe" Martin.

The prosecution reverses came yesterday when three witnesses failed to identify the comely evangelist as the woman who spent several days with Ormiston at the Carmel by the Sea cottage while Mrs. McPherson was being sought by thousands of her followers.

These witnesses included Jesse Lynch Williams, a messenger boy; Howard C. Benedict, owner of the cottage, and William McPhael.

Benedict, however, said the woman he saw at the cottage was very similar in appearance to the evangelist, although the woman was heavily veiled. He said he saw a green bathing suit at the cottage. Mrs. McPherson was wearing a green bathing suit when she disappeared at Venice Beach.

COOLIDGE TO TAKE PART IN PARTY BATTLE

REPUBLICANS WILL SEEK TO RETAIN CONTROL OF CONGRESS

CLAIMED PERSONAL SUPPORT OF CHIEF EXECUTIVE WILL BRIGHTEN HOPES

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Sept. 29.—President Coolidge has been prevailed upon by republican leaders to take a more active part than he had planned in the party battle to retain control of congress.

Republican scouts who have toured the country have returned to the White House with the information that only the complete personal support of the chief executive will brighten the hopes of party candidates in many sections.

Thus far Mr. Coolidge has not consented to make speeches but if the necessity becomes acute within the next few weeks renewed efforts will be made to have him take the stump in several states.

He has agreed to use his name as a rallying cry. In virtually every state republican senatorial and congressional candidates have collaborated upon the slogan: "Stand by the president." They have been promised full leeway in making their campaigns upon the issue of "Coolidge and prosperity."

The president expects to attend the army-navy football game in Chicago, November 27, but does not plan to take advantage of his presence in Chicago to deliver an address.

He is undecided whether to speak in Kansas City on Armistice Day, where he has been invited.

Mr. Coolidge had given leaders to understand that cabinet officers would be permitted to aid candidates and that they could consider the passive force of the administration back of them, but that he personally did not intend to make it a personal fight for retention of control in congress.

Shortly after the president's return from White Pine court, however, Senator Willis, republican, O., came with word that he needed full hearted acceptance of the chief executive. Later Senator McNary, member of the republican senatorial campaign committee, told the president of the need of his name in the west. Then Chairman Phipps of the committee went to the White House and later announced that "the issue is Mr. Coolidge."

ATTORNEYS IN CHAMBERS ARGUE LEGAL POINTS

UNDERSTOOD JUDGE IN METALS CASE HAS RULED ON GEO. E. WILLIAMS

THAT ASSISTANT TO MILLER WAS NOT A PARTY TO ANY CONSPIRACY

By E. W. LEWIS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Sept. 29.—(UP)—Attorneys today argued in chambers before Federal Judge Julian Mack over the legal points involved in the trial of Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, and Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general, for alleged conspiracy to defraud the government. The jury was excused.

It was understood that Judge Mack already had made a tentative ruling that George E. Williams, assistant to Miller in the alien property custodian's office, was not a party to any conspiracy. Such a ruling would form a basis for a defense motion to strike out of the evidence all testimony regarding conversations between Richard Merton and Williams, which were an important portion of the government case.

Merton had testified it was Williams who gave him valuable information about the method to follow in his efforts to secure return of $7,000,000 worth of property seized by the government during the war.

The government indicated it was ready to fight to retain in the record that portion of the evidence even though it were ruled Williams had no knowledge of a conspiracy. Williams was not named in the indictment.

The defense motion to dismiss the charges also was before Judge Mack and part of today's discussion was in connection with that motion.

LIFE AND PROPERTY LOSS FEARED HEAVY

FRAGMENTARY REPORTS RECEIVED FROM THE RAVAGED CITY

COMMUNICATION FACILITIES ARE BADLY CRIPPLED BY STORM

By A. W. FOLGER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Mexico City, Sept. 29.—A hurricane and tidal wave has swept historic Vera Cruz, perched perilously near sea level on the Gulf of Campeche. Life and property loss is feared, according to fragmentary reports coming out of the ravaged city by crippled communication facilities.

The wind, accompanied by heavy rains, swept westward over the mountains. Buildings in the path were wrecked and it is feared that many Indians in the hill country lost their lives.

The tail end of the storm struck here late yesterday and the barometer dropped but the wind did not reach hurricane force.

Four ships were sunk in Vera Cruz harbor, scene of bombardments for more than 100 years. The crews of the Anahuac and the San Juan, small steamers, were lost, according to reports. Messages received at railroad offices say that many persons were killed in the poorer districts where wooden houses collapsed, burying the occupants. Another storm was expected hourly, railroad advices said.

The conductor of a train, which left Vera Cruz at noon said that great damage had been done all along the line from Vera Cruz to Cordoba, 100 miles inland. Many houses have been unroofed and many totally destroyed, he declared.

VIOLENT WIND STORM IN ARIZONA

Tucson, Ariz., Sept. 29. — Hundreds of families were homeless today, several bridges have been destroyed and small streams have been turned into torrents causing suspension of railroads and highway traffic in an area of more than 400 square miles in the southwest by violent wind and rain storms. Telegraph and telephone communication facilities have suffered heavily.

Northern Mexico, the central west coast of Mexico, southern Arizona and western New Mexico comprise the area affected. The normally bone dry Santa Cruz river has overflowed its banks.

Many are homeless in Douglas, Ariz., and in the communities south of there. Adobe huts suffered heavily. Soldiers encamped at Nogales, Ariz., were driven to the hills by the flood waters.

Winds accompanying the rains at the border almost demolished the barracks of the 25th infantry at Nogales.

Hundreds of automobiles have been abandoned because of flooded highways in southern Arizona and across the international boundary.

HURRICANE DAMAGE NOW MINIMIZED

New Orleans, La., Sept. 29—Damage caused by the hurricane and tidal wave which swept the port of Vera Cruz yesterday was minimized by officials of the All-American Cables Company here today.

A message filed in Vera Cruz at 10:30 A. M. said:

"Hurricane blowing heavily. Rain falling. Water overflowing office."

At 12:42 P. M. another message was received saying: "Storm over. Office condition unchanged."

CLAIM LOSS OF LIFE IS SMALL

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 29. — Reports from Vera Cruz say that the loss of life in the storm there has been small. Property damage is estimated at about $2,500,000. Many houses were blown off their foundations and small shipping suffered most, according to cable reports.

Los Angeles, Sept. 29.—A carpenter, John Considine, was called today by District Attorney Asa Keyes in an attempt to turn the tide of prosecution reverses in conspiracy hearing of Mrs. Aimee Sempel McPherson, noted evangelist.

Considine is said to have witnessed many amorous scenes at the Carmel by the Sea "love nest" where the state believes Mrs. McPherson visited during her mysterious disappearance. It will be the third day of the hearing for Mrs. McPherson, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman Seilaf, Kenneth G. Ormiston and "John Doe" Martin.

The prosecution reverses came yesterday when three witnesses failed to identify the comely evangelist as the woman who spent several days with Ormiston at the Carmel by the Sea cottage while Mrs. McPherson was being sought by thousands of her followers.

These witnesses included Jesse Lynch Williams, a messenger boy; Howard C. Benedict, owner of the cottage, and William McPhael.

Benedict, however, said the woman he saw at the cottage was very similar in appearance to the evangelist, although the woman was heavily veiled. He said he saw a green bathing suit at the cottage. Mrs. McPherson was wearing a green bathing suit when she disappeared at Venice Beach.

COOLIDGE TO TAKE PART IN PARTY BATTLE

REPUBLICANS WILL SEEK TO RETAIN CONTROL OF CONGRESS

CLAIMED PERSONAL SUPPORT OF CHIEF EXECUTIVE WILL BRIGHTEN HOPES

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Sept. 29.—President Coolidge has been prevailed upon by republican leaders to take a more active part than he had planned in the party battle to retain control of congress.

Republican scouts who have toured the country have returned to the White House with the information that only the complete personal support of the chief executive will brighten the hopes of party candidates in many sections.

Thus far Mr. Coolidge has not consented to make speeches but if the necessity becomes acute within the next few weeks renewed efforts will be made to have him take the stump in several states.

He has agreed to use his name as a rallying cry. In virtually every state republican senatorial and congressional candidates have collaborated upon the slogan: "Stand by the president." They have been promised full leeway in making their campaigns upon the issue of "Coolidge and prosperity."

The president expects to attend the army-navy football game in Chicago, November 27, but does not plan to take advantage of his presence in Chicago to deliver an address.

He is undecided whether to speak in Kansas City on Armistice Day, where he has been invited.

Mr. Coolidge had given leaders to understand that cabinet officers would be permitted to aid candidates and that they could consider the passive force of the administration back of them, but that he personally did not intend to make it a personal fight for retention of control in congress.

Shortly after the president's return from White Pine court, however, Senator Willis, republican, O., came with word that he needed full hearted acceptance of the chief executive. Later Senator McNary, member of the republican senatorial campaign committee, told the president of the need of his name in the west. Then Chairman Phipps of the committee went to the White House and later announced that "the issue is Mr. Coolidge."

ATTORNEYS IN CHAMBERS ARGUE LEGAL POINTS

UNDERSTOOD JUDGE IN METALS CASE HAS RULED ON GEO. E. WILLIAMS

THAT ASSISTANT TO MILLER WAS NOT A PARTY TO ANY CONSPIRACY

By E. W. LEWIS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Sept. 29.—(UP)—Attorneys today argued in chambers before Federal Judge Julian Mack over the legal points involved in the trial of Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, and Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general, for alleged conspiracy to defraud the government. The jury was excused.

It was understood that Judge Mack already had made a tentative ruling that George E. Williams, assistant to Miller in the alien property custodian's office, was not a party to any conspiracy. Such a ruling would form a basis for a defense motion to strike out of the evidence all testimony regarding conversations between Richard Merton and Williams, which were an important portion of the government case.

Merton had testified it was Williams who gave him valuable information about the method to follow in his efforts to secure return of $7,000,000 worth of property seized by the government during the war.

The government indicated it was ready to fight to retain in the record that portion of the evidence even though it were ruled Williams had no knowledge of a conspiracy. Williams was not named in the indictment.

The defense motion to dismiss the charges also was before Judge Mack and part of today's discussion was in connection with that motion.

LIFE AND PROPERTY LOSS FEARED HEAVY

FRAGMENTARY REPORTS RECEIVED FROM THE RAVAGED CITY

COMMUNICATION FACILITIES ARE BADLY CRIPPLED BY STORM

By A. W. FOLGER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Mexico City, Sept. 29.—A hurricane and tidal wave has swept historic Vera Cruz, perched perilously near sea level on the Gulf of Campeche. Life and property loss is feared, according to fragmentary reports coming out of the ravaged city by crippled communication facilities.

The wind, accompanied by heavy rains, swept westward over the mountains. Buildings in the path were wrecked and it is feared that many Indians in the hill country lost their lives.

The tail end of the storm struck here late yesterday and the barometer dropped but the wind did not reach hurricane force.

Four ships were sunk in Vera Cruz harbor, scene of bombardments for more than 100 years. The crews of the Anahuac and the San Juan, small steamers, were lost, according to reports. Messages received at railroad offices say that many persons were killed in the poorer districts where wooden houses collapsed, burying the occupants. Another storm was expected hourly, railroad advices said.

The conductor of a train, which left Vera Cruz at noon said that great damage had been done all along the line from Vera Cruz to Cordoba, 100 miles inland. Many houses have been unroofed and many totally destroyed, he declared.

VIOLENT WIND STORM IN ARIZONA

Tucson, Ariz., Sept. 29. — Hundreds of families were homeless today, several bridges have been destroyed and small streams have been turned into torrents causing suspension of railroads and highway traffic in an area of more than 400 square miles in the southwest by violent wind and rain storms. Telegraph and telephone communication facilities have suffered heavily.

Northern Mexico, the central west coast of Mexico, southern Arizona and western New Mexico comprise the area affected. The normally bone dry Santa Cruz river has overflowed its banks.

Many are homeless in Douglas, Ariz., and in the communities south of there. Adobe huts suffered heavily. Soldiers encamped at Nogales, Ariz., were driven to the hills by the flood waters.

Winds accompanying the rains at the border almost demolished the barracks of the 25th infantry at Nogales.

Hundreds of automobiles have been abandoned because of flooded highways in southern Arizona and across the international boundary.

HURRICANE DAMAGE NOW MINIMIZED

New Orleans, La., Sept. 29—Damage caused by the hurricane and tidal wave which swept the port of Vera Cruz yesterday was minimized by officials of the All-American Cables Company here today.

A message filed in Vera Cruz at 10:30 A. M. said:

"Hurricane blowing heavily. Rain falling. Water overflowing office."

At 12:42 P. M. another message was received saying: "Storm over. Office condition unchanged."

CLAIM LOSS OF LIFE IS SMALL

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 29. — Reports from Vera Cruz say that the loss of life in the storm there has been small. Property damage is estimated at about $2,500,000. Many houses were blown off their foundations and small shipping suffered most, according to cable reports.

Miami Beach soon will boast the "sweetest" golf course in the world with the use of 100,000 pounds of Cuban raw sugar for a fertilizer experiment. A surplus in the market allowed the purchase of sugar at 1½ cents a pound, a lower figure than the Everglades muck soil which the course builder had been using as a fertilizer. He plans to use the bulk of the shipment on greens and fairways over his four golf courses, and possibly a small amount on trees and shrubbery.

Miami Beach soon will boast the "sweetest" golf course in the world with the use of 100,000 pounds of Cuban raw sugar for a fertilizer experiment. He plans to use the bulk of the shipment on greens and fairways over his four golf courses, and possibly a small amount on trees and shrubbery.

STORM EXPERIENCES AT OKEECHOBEE, FLA.

Mother of Ira L. Tomlinson Gives Harrowing Account of Hurricane Striking There

STILL FINDING MANY DEAD

Live Babies Found Floating on Mattresses, Three Mothers Claim One Child

Ira L. Tomlinson, well known barber beneath Hohman's store, has received a letter from his parents who live in Okeechobee, Florida and which tells of some of the awful sights and experiences that people witnessed and passed through before and after the recent hurricane.

Mrs. Tomlinson, in writing to her son, says that they are getting along very well considering the present circumstances. The north end of the storm struck Okeechobee, which is 20 miles from Miami directly across Lake Okeechobee, and its force was not comparable to that around Miami and other cities on the east coast, there being no casualties and little property damage.

In writing further, she tells of the many people that were killed and drowned and of several of their own townspeople, whom they knew, and living in Miami who were drowned in the flood that spread over the city.

"They are still finding the dead and I reckon that they will never find all of them. Yesterday they found a live baby at Moorehaven and it was said that three women claimed the child. Fishermen have found other infants floating on bedding and it is impossible to tell to whom they belong or where they came from.

"People from all parts of the world were in Miami so it is small wonder that some have not been identified and we have heard that on account of the scarcity of things with which to give them a burial, the bodies are burned. The wealthy people are therefore in as difficult circumstances as the poor and from all accounts, the Florida residents having been over glorious in their wealth and prosperity can be said to have been visited by the hurricane as a form of punishment sent by the Supreme Power.

"I felt that our house would go every minute and as it has been prophesied that another hurricane more terrible than the first is coming I certainly hope and trust that it will not return here."

ALL AMERICANS IN VERA CRUZ SAFE

Vera Cruz, Mexico, Sept. 29.—All Americans in Vera Cruz, which was struck by a storm yesterday are safe, according to American Vice Consul Myers.

No Americans were injured.

Principal losses are along the water front where the waves broke over the breakwater to a height of 10 feet, flooding warehouses.

It was believed a final check up would show that a few sailors were drowned when small coasting vessels were sunk in the harbor.

"FAMILIARITY BREEDS CONTEMPT"

But only for the contemptible!

Familiarity is the acid test of character. Under its white light all vices and virtues stand out in bold relief.

The man who deserves respect usually gets it—eventually, as the facts become known. It is the faker, the four-flusher and the shyster who fears familiarity.

Nothing breeds contempt like ignorance. We condemn that which we do not understand and ridicule that of which we are ignorant.

Abraham Lincoln, during his presidency, was the most generally condemned and misunderstood man who ever sat in the White House. Since his death the nation has become increasingly familiar with every detail of his life with the result that he now stands as our "First American."

Comparatively few of this year's "best sellers" in the fiction field will ever get a second or a third reading, but the plays of Shakespeare and Ibsen are permanently new. No amount of familiarity can make us contemptuous of them.

More copies of the Bible were sold last year than ever before in history and more people found inspiration and help on its pages. With every reading our respect for it increases and the market for it enlarges.

The European who sees only the American tourist thinks that we are a nation of dollar chasers. The one who comes to know us finds the soul of America sound.

Familiarity is fatal to the man who has something to hide. To the man whose heart is clean familiarity is a coveted ally.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS MEETING

Extensive Plans Made For a "Get Out the Vote" Campaign

COOPERATION SOUGHT

Entire Membership Made Delegates to Duluth Convention in October

At a meeting of the local board of the League of Women Voters yesterday, plans were made for a "Get Out The Vote" campaign. These consisted in the distribution of dodgers, a competition among school children of citizenship posters, the best to be exhibited, in enlisting the co-operation of the moving picture managers, and in the offer of co-operation with the American Legion and Auxiliary in any plans they may have for getting out the vote.

Election of officers was set for next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the Chamber of Commerce. Definite announcement will be made later.

It was decided to have the little play dealing with the Child Labor Amendment given at this meeting. The play is a clever little skit entitled "The Family Takes Notice." Mrs. C. L. Burnett has kindly consented to read this play. In view of the fact that many members of the board were hoping to attend the coming convention in Duluth, Oct. 7, 8, and 9 and that the state office had sent such a generous number of credential cards to Brainerd, a motion was made and carried that the entire membership of the board be delegated to attend this convention.

Chlorine Bomb for Home

A chlorine gas bomb has just been perfected by a couple of chemists of San Francisco by which the same results may be obtained in a treatment at home as that provided by more elaborate apparatus. All that is necessary is for the patient suffering from a cold to sit in a closed room for an hour after breaking off the ends of the gas bomb, which is a glass globe filled with pure, filtered chlorine gas. The escaping gas mingles with the air of the room and, it is claimed, will cure a stubborn cold.

A special decree was necessary to suspend the usual provision that archeological objects shall not be exported from the country.

Line up Five Cars in Your Mind—
How Can You Mistake the Chrysler "50"?

The Chrysler plan of Quality Standardization differs from, and is superior to, ordinary manufacturing practice and methods, because it demands fixed and inflexible quality standards which enforce the same scrupulously close limits—the same rigid rule of engineering exactness—the same absolute accuracy and precision of alignment and assemblage—in the measurement, the machining and the manufacturing of every part, practice and process in four lines of Chrysler cars—"50", "60", "70" and Imperial "80"—so that each individual car shall be the Supreme Value in its own class.

With only four other cars of large production in the four-cylinder field, it is exceedingly easy to recognize the outstanding values of the Chrysler "50" and decide which car to buy.

Lining up the five cars side by side in your own mind, you will be startled by the contrast between them—and especially by the contrast between the Chrysler "50" and all the others.

In point of size, seating room, beauty of design, beauty of finish and power, the Chrysler "50" stands out so unmistakably that you recognize the price at once as far and away the greatest offering ever made in four-cylinder cars.

It will continue to yield a sustained speed of 50 miles and more per hour, 5 to 25 miles in 8 seconds, and 25 miles to the gallon—for months and for years, as the result of Chrysler's plan of Quality Standardization.

At last it is possible for you to make a convincing and conclusive comparison of values—studying the comfort, appearance and performance factors of the Chrysler "50" in comparison with everything else offered—and satisfy yourself almost at a glance in which car you should invest your money.

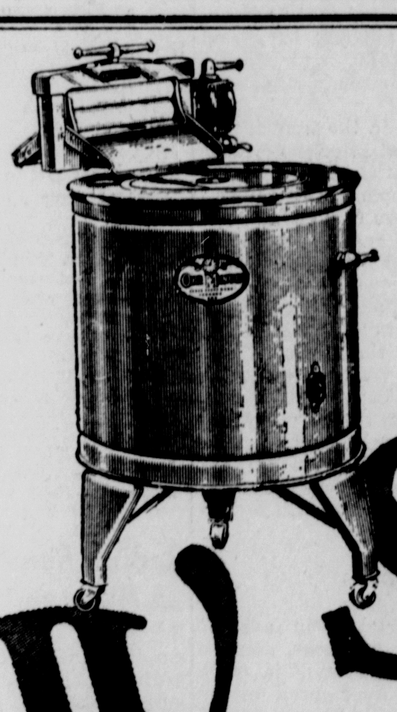

Examine and ride in the new Chrysler "50" and you will not consider any other car in its price class.

MICKIE SAYS—

Postgraduate Diploma

"When one of my feminine friends asks how old I am," said the resourceful woman, "I always put the burden of the fib on the questioner." "How do you mean?" "I just say lightly: 'Oh, I'm a year or two older than you, you know, my dear—at least a year older. Let me see now, how old are you?' And then she always knocks more off my age than I should ever have the courage to do myself.—Boston Transcript.

Line up Five Cars in Your Mind— How Can You Mistake the Chrysler "50"?

The Chrysler plan of Quality Standardization differs from, and is superior to, ordinary manufacturing practice and methods, because it demands fixed and inflexible quality standards which enforce the same scrupulously close limits—the same rigid rule of engineering exactness—the same absolute accuracy and precision of alignment and assemblage—in the measurement, the machining and the manufacturing of every part, practice and process in four lines of Chrysler cars—"50", "60", "70" and Imperial "80"—so that each individual car shall be the Supreme Value in its own class.

With only four other cars of large production in the four-cylinder field, it is exceedingly easy to recognize the outstanding values of the Chrysler "50" and decide which car to buy.

Lining up the five cars side by side in your own mind, you will be startled by the contrast between them—and especially by the contrast between the Chrysler "50" and all the others.

In point of size, seating room, beauty of design, beauty of finish and power, the Chrysler "50" stands out so unmistakably that you recognize the price at once as far and away the greatest offering ever made in four-cylinder cars.

It will continue to yield a sustained speed of 50 miles and more per hour, 5 to 25 miles in 8 seconds, and 25 miles to the gallon—for months and for years, as the result of Chrysler's plan of Quality Standardization.

At last it is possible for you to make a convincing and conclusive comparison of values—studying the comfort, appearance and performance factors of the Chrysler "50" in comparison with everything else offered—and satisfy yourself almost at a glance in which car you should invest your money.

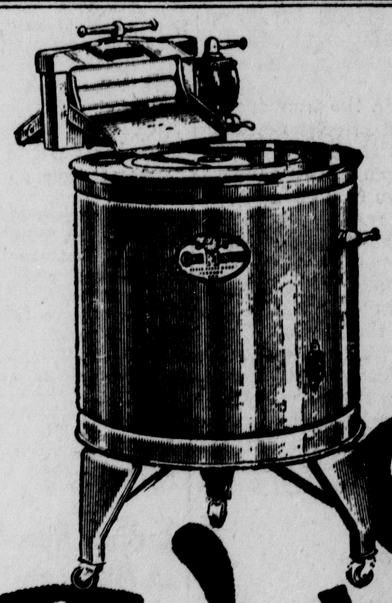

Examine and ride in the new Chrysler "50" and you will not consider any other car in its price class.

EXPLAINING DAD

STUDYING the moods and philosophy of a household is a rare problem and no one has better sized up an angle of the home than the Detroit News which has given this lovable exposition of traits of Dad, when somebody is casting loving glances at the daughter of the household.

When a son of a family gets old enough to marry, Dad may drop a few hints about the advisability of selecting a nice sensible girl; but he doesn't intrude offensively, for down in his heart he feels that the affair is none of his business. All males have inalienable rights in these matters, even sons.

Daughter's case is another matter. Dad remembers that he was a devil with the ladies and tried to kiss every girl he went with, and he is suspicious of the young males who hang about. He eyes them coldly. The young rascals! They needn't look so innocent. Dad knows.

And when it appears that daughter really is in love with one of them and on the verge of marrying, Dad begins to storm. He is helpless, and he knows it. But helplessness serves only to stir his wrath. He pouts. He makes pathetic remarks about how little the child he has slaved for loves him in return. He is coldly polite when the young man is present.

Now, what's the matter with the old chap? Dad's trouble is jealousy, nothing more. There is bred into his cosmos a conviction that the male is, and of a right ought to be, head of his clan, tribe and family. The advent of feminism may have turned the world topsy-turvy and made the woman boss, but it hasn't taken away the male instinct.

Dad feels that he is the head. Daughter is his woman just as much as his wife is his woman. And any young whipper-snapper who wins the heart of daughter is in reality deposing Dad and stealing part of his authority.

Think of daughter looking up to some other man—petting some other man—asking some other man's advice! Why, it means abdication! It means that old Dad is a has-been, a toothless old wolf no longer reverenced as leader of the pack.

And mother makes matters worse. She smiles on the young man. She praises him. The king is dead; long live the king!

Poor Dad! Poor, forlorn, side-tracked jealous old ex-chief.

HAS ST. CLOUD FORGOTTEN?

THE St. Cloud Daily Journal-Press heads an editorial with the caption, "Has St. Cloud Forgotten?" and remarks that in an appeal before the Kiwanis club yesterday for funds to aid the stricken people of Florida Dr. Harry Clark stated that the subscriptions to the fund from St. Cloud totaled but $22. The Red Cross at Sartell had sent in $25, Brooten $100, and similar amounts from other small villages. The comparison is very, very bad.

"What is the matter? Are we indifferent to the suffering of others or just neglectful? One would think that after the cyclone experience of St. Cloud many years ago, and with the knowledge of the more than generous response of the people of this country to the needs of St. Cloud when we were stricken that the appeals of other suffering people would always find a ready response in our hearts. Let's put a little beefsteak on and not let the world know our eye is black."

That is the St. Cloud situation. Brainerd, according to what reports have been made, had an appeal in the Brainerd Daily Dispatch for donations to be transmitted to the Brainerd Red Cross. To date there has been so raised and transmitted to the Red Cross $39. The Elks lodge of Brainerd canvassed its own membership and according to last reports from its secretary had received donations of $140. It is believed other lodges and agencies are at work, the Salvation Army, Masons, Knight of Pythias, etc., but no reports of their collections have been received.

The Brainerd situation on Florida relief work is a little better than St. Cloud.

ALL VEHICLES SHOULD CARRY LIGHTS

THE Two Harbors Chronicle takes up the cudgels in favor of having lights on all vehicles, wagons, buggies, hayracks, manure spreaders, tractors, etc., and we are heartily in favor of it. One would think that in these days of 35 mile an hour speed on the highways and of heavy traffic, that a farmer should carry a light for his own protection, law or no law. The Chronicle says:

Over at the Two Harbors hospital a young man has been hovering between life and death for two weeks because a farmer failed to have a light on the rear of a load of hay driven after dark. The legislature, very foolishly failed to make it compulsory for horse-drawn vehicles to carry real lights, but drivers of such vehicles should do so for their own protection, if not for the protection of the motoring public. The driver of a horse-drawn vehicle is jeopardizing his own safety every time he passes a motor vehicle going in the opposite direction, because of the fact that his vehicle is doubly obscured on account of the glare of the headlights from the opposite direction interfering with the vision of the driver following him. The law should be changed at the next legislature to include all vehicles.

The Milaca Times says:

Another menace almost as serious as the reckless and drunken driver is the person that drives on the trunk highways at night with an unlighted horse-drawn vehicle. It is almost impossible to detect horse-drawn vehicles on the highway at night in passing the glaring headlights of cars and such vehicles should carry a warning red light. The next legislature should enact a measure that will remove this menace on the public highways.

DULL AUDIENCES

THAT vaudeville veteran, James Thornton, is back in Boston, where he began his career fifty years ago. And what he says of present-day audiences isn't flattering.

He finds that jokes no longer get across unless they are absurdly simple; about babies and automobiles and mothers-in-law. The entertainer almost has to hit his audience in the face with his humor.

Thornton accuses the movies of having caused this. He declares that they have robbed people of their thinking faculties by doing the thinking for them; making the films too easy of comprehension.

Now the fact is that the character of audiences has changed, for many reasons. A lot of people go to shows nowadays who wouldn't have had the price to go in the old days. And audiences are composed in part of persons who have not been in this country long enough to acquire the common background of language and experience which Americans of an earlier generation had.

Yet the movies are not entirely blameless. Undeniably they have played down to their audiences too much, for fear of losing them. What entertainers have not for that matter?—Boston Traveler.

BRAINERD 25 YEARS AGO

From the Daily Dispatch

Sept. 28, 1901

The seventh annual session of the Northern Minnesota conference will convene in this city next Tuesday and it is expected that no less than 200 ministers including about 150 ladies will be present.

Rev. James Clulow of the First Methodist church has arranged the program for the conference after considerable work. It will be replete with good things, some of the most prominent men of the church having signified their intentions of being present. * * * The opening of the conference will be a reception on Tuesday evening to Bishop Cranston who is to preside at the conference. Mayor A. J. Halsted will give an address of welcome on behalf of the city, and Rev. A. H. Carver will welcome the members of the conference on behalf of the churches of the city.

The conference will be in session for one week and the evening sessions will all be held in Gardner's hall.

Alderman C. B. Rowley left this afternoon for Duluth where he goes on business.

Mrs. G. F. Mitchell and daughter Miss Ella Mitchell returned this afternoon from Minneapolis.

Mrs. A. L. Mattes returned from an extended eastern trip this afternoon.

Cashier H. D. Treglawney returned from a business trip to the Twin Cities this morning.

Judge Mantor came in from the north this morning with a nice bag of chickens and ducks.

Electricity Kills Pests

Live electric wires strung through the trees are the latest means of fighting the destructive codling moths that infest the orchards and rose gardens of the Northwest. Preliminary tests, made possible by the co-operation of fruit growers in this region, have been considered sufficiently successful to justify more extensive installations. It his been found that the powerful electric fields created by the passage of a strong current through the wires appear to keep off the pests with an operating time as brief as five minutes a day.

FADS OF THE FAMOUS

Gov. Vic. Donahey

Governor Vic Donahey of Ohio has a hobby which has stood to good advantage on more than one occasion.

The Ohio executive can justly lay claim to being an excellent cook. Governor Donahey can bake pies, cakes, cookies and all the other delicacies usually considered a woman's handiwork.

During the summer months when the governor and his family spend most of their time at their summer home, the governor holds full sway in the kitchen. So far, he has managed to appease the appetites of his family, consisting of his wife and 11 children.

It has become a yearly custom and almost a tradition, for Governor Donahey to "throw" a party for statehouse newspaper correspondents and their families.

Turtle soup has been the piece de resistance at these dinners given by the governor. No one but the governor himself is allowed in the kitchen on these occasions.

He not only prepares the entire meal for the fifty odd visitors, but usually bakes the pies for dessert and usually has some culinary surprise which he serves up for "immediate release" to the newspapermen.

Governor Donahey has been interested in cooks and kitchens since his early days on a farm.

Tax on Ears in Tibet

In Tibet there is a tax on ears, and one-eared men are feeling fortunate again. The full tax only is levied on men with two ears, and it was the levying of this tax a year or so ago that caused revolutionary outbreak. One-eared men have to pay only 50 per cent of the assessed tax. Those without ears are completely exempt.

Quail's Other Name

Bobwhite is a local term for any quail of the genus Colinus, of which the best known species, Colinus Virginianus, ranges over the eastern and central United States northward to the southern parts of New England and Minnesota.

A Word With the Old Folks

Elderly People Are Learning Importance of Good Elimination.

IN the later years of life there is apt to be a slowing up of the bodily functions. Good elimination, however, is just as essential to the old as to the young. Many old folks have learned the value of Doan's Pills when a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys is required. Scanty or burning passages of kidney secretions are often signs of improper kidney function. In most every community are scores of users and endorsers who acclaim the merit of *Doan's. FADS OF THE FAMOUS

Gov. Vic. Donahey

Governor Vic Donahey of Ohio has a hobby which has stood to good advantage on more than one occasion.

The Ohio executive can justly lay claim to being an excellent cook. Governor Donahey can bake pies, cakes, cookies and all the other delicacies usually considered a woman's handiwork.

During the summer months when the governor and his family spend most of their time at their summer home, the governor holds full sway in the kitchen. So far, he has managed to appease the appetites of his family, consisting of his wife and 11 children.

It has become a yearly custom and almost a tradition, for Governor Donahey to "throw" a party for statehouse newspaper correspondents and their families.

Turtle soup has been the piece de resistance at these dinners given by the governor. No one but the governor himself is allowed in the kitchen on these occasions.

He not only prepares the entire meal for the fifty odd visitors, but usually bakes the pies for dessert and usually has some culinary surprise which he serves up for "immediate release" to the newspapermen.

Tax on Ears in Tibet

In Tibet there is a tax on ears, and one-eared men are feeling fortunate again. The full tax only is levied on men with two ears, and it was the levying of this tax a year or so ago that caused revolutionary outbreak. One-eared men have to pay only 50 per cent of the assessed tax. Those without ears are completely exempt.

Quail's Other Name

A Word With the Old Folks

Elderly People Are Learning Importance of Good Elimination.

IN the later years of life there is apt to be a slowing up of the bodily functions. Good elimination, however, is just as essential to the old as to the young. Many old folks have learned the value of Doan's Pills when a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys is required. Scanty or burning passages of kidney secretions are often signs of improper kidney function. In most every community are scores of users and endorsers who acclaim the merit of *Doan's. Tracked by the Police

Novel by — William B. Courtney

Copyright, 1926, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"TRACKED BY THE POLICE," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, is a Warner Bros. production of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

While he fights in rainsoaked France the thoughts of Private Jimmy Ford are as low as the weather. Among the things that have sustained him through the horrors of war are letters from his sweetheart, Ruth Allen. One of these letters is the cause of his misery, because it tells of the attention Dan Murtagh, a politician, pays her in Jimmy's absence. In his heartbreak he volunteers for a dangerous raid. A German war dog gives her life to save his. Jimmy, in gratitude, adopts her puppy, smuggles it into Hoboken after the war and turns it over to his parents and sweetheart . . .

CHAPTER 2—Continued

"I suppose you know all about mademoiselles and what they wear. I guess there were lots of mademoiselles!" Ruth remarked stiffly.

Jimmy ignored that, but explained:

"We all got together one night in the rest camp after we were sent back from the trenches where I got Rinty. And the boys decided that the pup ought to have a name. So I suggested 'Spot.' 'But he ain't got no spots,' said Bill Geel you know, him that worked in Burns' Drug Store. So another guy suggested 'Trenchy.' Someone hit him with a G. I. can. Ike Schuman tried 'Over There.' We threw him out of the tent. Imagine being reminded of things like that! Then a fellow said, 'Let's call him "Mademoiselle Mudhole."' But he ain't that kind of a dog, and 'Monsieur' is no name for a respectable mutt.

"So that Taylor fellow—you know, the long drink, who wears glasses and was a reporter on the Press—said, 'He's such a droll looking little creature, just like a hairy toy, let's name him after those quaint amulets the French girls are wearing—Rin-Tin-Tin.'

"Mickey Feenan got sore and said, 'This pup ain't no omelette—and if you call him after an omelette it means he's got yellow in him.' But the rest of us who ain't so dumb laughed Mickey down and thought Taylor's idea was a pretty good one. So there you are——"

Jimmy had to return to his outfit now. They were to go straight to Camp Dix., without leave, for quick demobilization. Several days, with luck, and he might be home. For good. He kissed Ruth and his mother and shook hands with Rinty, who moaned disconsolately and strained against the leash Ruth held, with the assistance of Mrs. Ford.

"I want to have a talk with you soon as I get back," said Jimmy gravely to Ruth as he left her, "and find out what the big idea is about this Murtagh fellow and what's between you."

"Oh, Jimmy, you silly boy!" Ruth's eyes were wide and startled. But her happiness at having him back more than offset any irritation aroused by his characteristically masculine stupidity about such matters. "There isn't a thing. He's just a friend—of my father's. You know I love you." She clung to him a minute longer on account of that.

"I don't like this fellow Murtagh," confided Police Lieutenant Ford, Sr., to Jimmy as he strode part of the way with the lad toward the place within the dock where K Company was enjoying one of its countless roll calls preparatory to marching for the trains that would bear them to Camp Dix. "I've been having a bit of trouble with him. He came to me and asked me to lay off rounding up some of the Hudson Busters. Said they were harmless, exuberant boys—friends of his. You know, Jimmy, they're a vicious lot. And they'll be harder than ever to handle now when those of them who were in the draft get home and mustered out and return to their old ways. I don't know what was behind Murtagh's request—it was more of a warning—but I suspect he's hand in glove with them in some shady business. I'm trying to clean up Chelsea, but there's some mysterious underhand power blocking me at every turn. I think it's Murtagh. I haven't any dead set evidence against him, but I've got good reason to have hunches. He's got rat eyes, and there's too much oil in his voice and salve in his manner. But he's powerful—both with the higher-ups and the lower-downs. I'll have to watch my step——"

Jimmy admired his father immensely. Loved him, even. The Police Lieutenant was a fine, strapping man—erect of carriage, square of chin, with flashing eyes and a flaming honesty as long as the summer's day. In all the Army Jimmy had not seen a Colonel or General he thought as fine and military looking as his father. Even Pershing—and Lord knows that man was as handsome and soldierly as they come. But Pershing had nothing on his father, thought Jimmy, whose greatest ambition in life was to be worthy to follow in his father's honored footsteps.

"Goodby, pop," said Jimmy, proudly noting that the Captain of K Company was eyeing the big, erect Police Lieutenant with respectful deference and coming up to shake hands with him.

"Goodby, son," said Ford, Sr., earnestly before turning to the Captain. "I've arranged things for you to take the first civil service examination for the Force that comes along. Your mother will be proud, Ruth will be proud—and I'll be proud." The father's steely eyes softened for a moment into wistfulness, and he lingered over a final handclasp and admonition: "Goodby, Jimmy. I've been so glad to see you again. Hurry home, boy, as soon as you can. Mother and Ruthie will be waiting for you."

One week later, when Jimmy got home at last to the little flat on Twenty-first Street, it was to keep sobbing, heart-wrenched vigil in the parlor beside the body of his father, who had been shot down in a night gunfight with persons unknown. The Hudson Busters were suspected, though forty-eight hours of police department netting and rounding up had not cracked through the mystery.

Next day, as Keenan, the undertaker, closed the coffin and shut the features of Police Lieutenant Ford, Sr., forever from the gaze of his loved ones, Young Jimmy Ford wailed a loud vow to get even with the Hudson Busters if it took him the whole of his life. He had always wanted to be on the Force; now he had a double incentive—vengeance added to ambition. He would consecrate his police career, with the help of his superior officers, to ferreting out, the exterminating of that deadly band of thugs and murderers. Him alone against the many.

In the shadows at the side of the little room, so heavy with the odor of funeral flowers, stood the Hon. Dan B. Murtagh, whose face was masked in an immobile smugness and hypocrisy, though his eyes flickered a little with enigmatic amusement at the anguished oath of the bereaved son.

CHAPTER 3

Rin-Tin-Tin, awakened by an animal instinct and a high and loyal sense of duty that combined to form a signal much more compelling than any artificial clarion such as an alarm clock, rose at six o'clock sharp of a clear morning from the cool, clean fibre mat that served him for a bed in the tidy kitchen of the Ford flat on West Twenty-first Street, New York City. The salmon hued loveliness of a September dawn traced out the spick and span corners of the room with soft radiancee. Rinty gravely yawned, then gingerly stepped off his mat. Next he indulged in what is the counterpart in every well-bred and self-respecting dog's life of a physically prideful human's morning shower bath; he shook himself efficiently and thoroughly. Starting at the tip of his tail, the "shake" convulsed his hips, snaked tortuously along his backbone, wriggled up the back of his neck and caused the hair to spring erect thereon, and snapped his head at the finish with a flourish that sent the last of the sleep flying from his eyes. Completely awake now, he grunted and began the final stage of his rising and setting-up ceremony and exercise—a prodigious stretch of his magnificent adult body from toe to toe of its giant, shaggy, steel-limbed beauty. First, he flattened his long, keen muzzle down, and with a slightly backward pull, upon his outstretched front paws, leaving his rump high in the air and his brush tense. Smoothly then—the whole process from beginning to end was a flawless, flowing rhythm of effortless continuity and grace—he thrust his massive body up and forward over his forelegs, which now bore the brunt of his full hundred pounds; then shof his hind legs straight out behind him, the big muscles rippling like enpouched snakes under the clean tawny flesh of his inner flanks. Fit for a frolic or a fight—during the day's dangerous work ahead.

HEDDA HOYT SAYS---

MILLINERY NEWS
By HEDDA HOYT

New York, Sept. 29.—(UP)—Two youthful motion picture actresses returning from abroad with navy blue Beret skull-tams perched pertly on their heads started something which the flappers are finishing. These tiny tams or Berets, duplicates of those worn by European fishermen, are merely two small circles of cloth sewn together with a round head-aperture finished with a narrow headband. A piece of rolled cloth shaped like a firecracker decorates the center crown. Young girls wear these wee tams low over their foreheads for street and sports occasions.

"Roll your own" is a slogan which many smart women are following. Dozens of little shops are selling unshaped hoods of felt or velour and Milady sits before the mirror and rolls the hood into semblance of a hat while the millinery pins, whacks and sews. At the end of the tussle one has a near duplicate of an import for $7.50. Each shop has numerous models which can be copied in individual headsizes if one wishes the usual thing. Due to the sudden change from boyish to high-crowned shapes, this making-on-the-head idea permits one to have an individual model at a nominal cost. Boyish felts still retain their prestige for sportswear, however.

Two-toned velvet turbans draped in high-crown effect are among the popular Fall millinery models but unless these carry out the color scheme of the costume they fall far from being smart. Usually the contrasting color is introduced by narrow circular strips extending about the crown although geometrical designs and small diamond-shaped insets are more interesting.

When the color contrast is too pronounced the effect is not as smart as when two well-blended shades of one color are used. Chanel red combined with a lighter pinkish red, Jungle green combined with lighter green, brown and burnt-orange, etc., have the blended idea. Unless the two-toned hat harmonizes perfectly with the costume it is better to choose a plain colored velvet model, a shade deeper than the costume.

Velvet must be considered a material for dresswear. It should not be used for sportswear or with strictly tailored outfits. In almost every instance the velvet hat carries out the draped idea which makes it suitable for dress or semi-dress occasions only.

Love at Any Cost in Rudy's Sheik Film

Wanderlust-afflicted youths and girls who pine for high-powered desert romance are getting a liberal education at the Lyceum. If Rudolph Valentino's last picture, "The Son of the Sheik," the current attraction, is any criterion, amorous adventure in the land of sand and oases isn't such a sinecure after all. Tonight is its last showing.

Screen Version of Stage Hit Coming

Another successful stage play has been transferred to the screen. This time it is Myron Fagan's play, "Mismates," with Doris Kenyon and Warner Baxter co-featured. "Mismates" is coming to the Lyceum theatre tomorrow for two days.

This play is admirably fitted for the screen. It is filled with stirring situations, brilliant spectacle, and has a story beautiful and dramatic. The story is built around the theme of mother love and a husband who deserts his wife and child, and the subsequent jailing of the wife. The working out of this situation is done in a masterly way.

MARINE BAND HAS HAD LONG CAREER

The United States Marine band is America's oldest and best known musical organization of this type, says the National Republic. In 1798 President John Adams signed a bill putting the Marine corps on a permanent basis. A fife and drum corps was then authorized, and this became the Marine band, so that it has a history of 127 years. The band gave its first open-air concert in Washington in 1800.

It first played at the White House when President Adams received on New Year's day 1801. The band has played at all inaugural balls and all important White House functions since. It has played at all Presidential funerals from that of Taylor to that of Harding, and was present when Lincoln made his Gettysburg address. It played for Lafayette when he toured the United States and for Edward VII when he journeyed through America as prince of Wales; it also played for his grandson, the present prince.

The most famous leader of the Marine band was John Philip Sousa, and some of his most famous compositions were first played by the band under his leadership.

FORTY-THREE MINERS ARE FOUND ALIVE

and the removal of debris has further delayed the work.

The men now have been imprisoned for 110 hours, 20 hours less than the officials set as the maximum that they could survive. Dr. E. H. Madajesky, mine physician, believes, however, that the men can live for another eight or nine days provided they have fresh air and water.

The Oliver Mining Company reported today that the Diamond drill had penetrated 50 feet of the distance of 400 feet it must go to create an aperture for a lead pipe through which food may be passed below.

Ironwood, Mich., Sept. 29. — No word of encouragement has come from the G. Pabst mine where 43 men have been entombed since a cavein Friday. The 110th hour of their imprisonment came and passed at 11:30 A. M. today. Officials of the Oliver Mining Company had predicted that there was no hope for the men beyond the 110th hour.

One world's record was believed to have been broken today. Desperate because of the bleak prospect, the rescue party in charge of the diamond drill sank a 2½ inch hole downward from the surface at a rate of speed never before equalled in such an operation. The drill had penetrated 100 feet at noon today.

This was one fourth of the direct distance from the surface to the eighth level and renewed the energy of all the rescue crews for it shortened the time when a pipe will be run through the aperture to convey food to those below if they are alive.

Speedier progress also was reported by rescue workers in charge of two of the three operations which are tunnelling shafts to the two levels where the men are believed to be.

However, a setback occurred as the result of seepage of water into the "G" shaft which is the only unobstructed entry into the mine. The moisture increased the danger of a new cavein and made extreme caution necessary in using the shaft.

Express Train Dependability

Hupmobile Six Built to same High Standards as Costliest Cars

Hupmobile Six a Leader, Also, in Complete, Modern Equipment

What goes into a motor car is vastly more important than what goes on it. You will not buy, of course, on mere externals and non-essentials, but on proven performance, dependability, long life, and low cost of maintenance. To superiority in these fundamentals, however, the Hupmobile Six also joins the latest and most complete equipment to be found on any car in its price class.

1. Oil filter
2. Gasoline filter—low gasoline consumption
3. Thermostatic heat control
4. Snubbers
5. Vision-ventilating windshield
6. Dash gasoline gauge
7. Clear vision bodies
8. Color options—Mohair upholstery in latest mode
9. Walnut grained panels on instrument board and window ledges
10. 4-wheel brakes
11. Special vibration damper
12. Headlights with tilting beam lenses and double filament bulbs

Sedan, five-passenger, four-door, $1385. Coupe, two-passenger, with rumble seat, $1395. Touring, five-passenger, $1325. Equipment includes 30 x 5.25 balloon tires, four-wheel brakes. All prices f. o. b. Detroit, plus revenue tax.

Certainly no car at its price — or within five hundred dollars of its price — compares with the Hupmobile Six in brilliant, delightful performance.

Its ability to perform and to out-perform, however, is not the most remarkable feature of this great car.

Underlying the public's admiration for this big, beautiful, full-size Hupmobile Six, is the deep seated respect of the average American for Hupmobile's traditional dependability.

Hupmobile pays millions of dollars more each year to make its Six one of the most dependable of all six-cylinder cars.

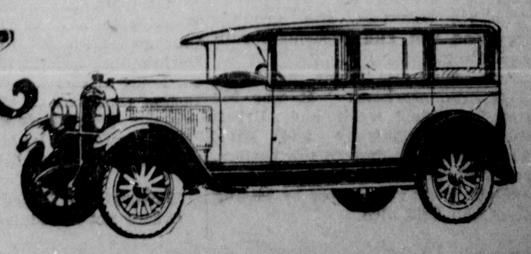

Owners, however, reap the benefit. The Hupmobile Six owner will tell you that his cost of maintenance is so low as to be almost negligible.

He will tell you that he can set out on a tour of a hundred, or a thousand or ten thousand miles, with the complete assurance that his journey will be unmarred by mechanical trouble or annoyance.

For you can drive this Hupmobile Six at express train speed, from sunrise to sunset, in the comforting knowledge that it is engineered and constructed to give such service easily, smoothly, and without straining.

Completely awake now, he grunted and began the final stage of his rising and setting-up ceremony and exercise—a prodigious stretch of his magnificent adult body from toe to toe of its giant, shaggy, steel-limbed beauty. First, he flattened his long, keen muzzle down, and with a slightly backward pull, upon his outstretched front paws, leaving his rump high in the air and his brush tense. Smoothly then—the whole process from beginning to end was a flawless, flowing rhythm of effortless continuity and grace—he thrust his massive body up and forward over his forelegs, which now bore the brunt of his full hundred pounds; then shot his hind legs straight out behind him, the big muscles rippling like enpouched snakes under the clean tawny flesh of his inner flanks. Fit for a frolic or a fight—during the day's dangerous work ahead.

MILLINERY NEWS
By HEDDA HOYT

New York, Sept. 29.—(UP)—Two youthful motion picture actresses returning from abroad with navy blue Beret skull-tams perched pertly on their heads started something which the flappers are finishing. These tiny tams or Berets, duplicates of those worn by European fishermen, are merely two small circles of cloth sewn together with a round head-aperture finished with a narrow headband. A piece of rolled cloth shaped like a firecracker decorates the center crown. Young girls wear these wee tams low over their foreheads for street and sports occasions.

"Roll your own" is a slogan which many smart women are following. Dozens of little shops are selling unshaped hoods of felt or velour and Milady sits before the mirror and rolls the hood into semblance of a hat while the millinery pins, whacks and sews. At the end of the tussle one has a near duplicate of an import for $7.50. Each shop has numerous models which can be copied in individual headsizes if one wishes the usual thing. Due to the sudden change from boyish to high-crowned shapes, this making-on-the-head idea permits one to have an individual model at a nominal cost. Boyish felts still retain their prestige for sportswear, however.

Two-toned velvet turbans draped in high-crown effect are among the popular Fall millinery models but unless these carry out the color scheme of the costume they fall far from being smart. Usually the contrasting color is introduced by narrow circular strips extending about the crown although geometrical designs and small diamond-shaped insets are more interesting.

When the color contrast is too pronounced the effect is not as smart as when two well-blended shades of one color are used. Chanel red combined with a lighter pinkish red, Jungle green combined with lighter green, brown and burnt-orange, etc., have the blended idea. Unless the two-toned hat harmonizes perfectly with the costume it is better to choose a plain colored velvet model, a shade deeper than the costume.

Velvet must be considered a material for dresswear. It should not be used for sportswear or with strictly tailored outfits. In almost every instance the velvet hat carries out the draped idea which makes it suitable for dress or semi-dress occasions only.

Love at Any Cost in Rudy's Sheik Film

Wanderlust-afflicted youths and girls who pine for high-powered desert romance are getting a liberal education at the Lyceum. If Rudolph Valentino's last picture, "The Son of the Sheik," the current attraction, is any criterion, amorous adventure in the land of sand and oases isn't such a sinecure after all. Tonight is its last showing.

Screen Version of Stage Hit Coming

Another successful stage play has been transferred to the screen. This time it is Myron Fagan's play, "Mismates," with Doris Kenyon and Warner Baxter co-featured. "Mismates" is coming to the Lyceum theatre tomorrow for two days.

This play is admirably fitted for the screen. It is filled with stirring situations, brilliant spectacle, and has a story beautiful and dramatic. The story is built around the theme of mother love and a husband who deserts his wife and child, and the subsequent jailing of the wife. The working out of this situation is done in a masterly way.

MARINE BAND HAS HAD LONG CAREER

The United States Marine band is America's oldest and best known musical organization of this type, says the National Republic. In 1798 President John Adams signed a bill putting the Marine corps on a permanent basis. A fife and drum corps was then authorized, and this became the Marine band, so that it has a history of 127 years. The band gave its first open-air concert in Washington in 1800.

It first played at the White House when President Adams received on New Year's day 1801. The band has played at all inaugural balls and all important White House functions since. It has played at all Presidential funerals from that of Taylor to that of Harding, and was present when Lincoln made his Gettysburg address. It played for Lafayette when he toured the United States and for Edward VII when he journeyed through America as prince of Wales; it also played for his grandson, the present prince.

The most famous leader of the Marine band was John Philip Sousa, and some of his most famous compositions were first played by the band under his leadership.

and the removal of debris has further delayed the work.

The men now have been imprisoned for 110 hours, 20 hours less than the officials set as the maximum that they could survive. Dr. E. H. Madajesky, mine physician, believes, however, that the men can live for another eight or nine days provided they have fresh air and water.

The Oliver Mining Company reported today that the Diamond drill had penetrated 50 feet of the distance of 400 feet it must go to create an aperture for a lead pipe through which food may be passed below.

Ironwood, Mich., Sept. 29. — No word of encouragement has come from the G. Pabst mine where 43 men have been entombed since a cavein Friday. The 110th hour of their imprisonment came and passed at 11:30 A. M. today. Officials of the Oliver Mining Company had predicted that there was no hope for the men beyond the 110th hour.

One world's record was believed to have been broken today. Desperate because of the bleak prospect, the rescue party in charge of the diamond drill sank a 2½ inch hole downward from the surface at a rate of speed never before equalled in such an operation. The drill had penetrated 100 feet at noon today.

This was one fourth of the direct distance from the surface to the eighth level and renewed the energy of all the rescue crews for it shortened the time when a pipe will be run through the aperture to convey food to those below if they are alive.

Speedier progress also was reported by rescue workers in charge of two of the three operations which are tunnelling shafts to the two levels where the men are believed to be.

However, a setback occurred as the result of seepage of water into the "G" shaft which is the only unobstructed entry into the mine. The moisture increased the danger of a new cavein and made extreme caution necessary in using the shaft.

Express Train Dependability

Hupmobile Six Built to same High Standards as Costliest Cars

Hupmobile Six a Leader, Also, in Complete, Modern Equipment

What goes into a motor car is vastly more important than what goes on it. You will not buy, of course, on mere externals and non-essentials, but on proven performance, dependability, long life, and low cost of maintenance. To superiority in these fundamentals, however, the Hupmobile Six also joins the latest and most complete equipment to be found on any car in its price class.

1. Oil filter
2. Gasoline filter—low gasoline consumption
3. Thermostatic heat control
4. Snubbers
5. Vision-ventilating windshield
6. Dash gasoline gauge
7. Clear vision bodies
8. Color options—Mohair upholstery in latest mode
9. Walnut grained panels on instrument board and window ledges
10. 4-wheel brakes
11. Special vibration damper
12. Headlights with tilting beam lenses and double filament bulbs

Sedan, five-passenger, four-door, $1385. Coupe, two-passenger, with rumble seat, $1395. Touring, five-passenger, $1325. Equipment includes 30 x 5.25 balloon tires, four-wheel brakes. All prices f. o. b. Detroit, plus revenue tax.

Certainly no car at its price — or within five hundred dollars of its price — compares with the Hupmobile Six in brilliant, delightful performance.

Its ability to perform and to out-perform, however, is not the most remarkable feature of this great car.

Underlying the public's admiration for this big, beautiful, full-size Hupmobile Six, is the deep seated respect of the average American for Hupmobile's traditional dependability.

Hupmobile pays millions of dollars more each year to make its Six one of the most dependable of all six-cylinder cars.

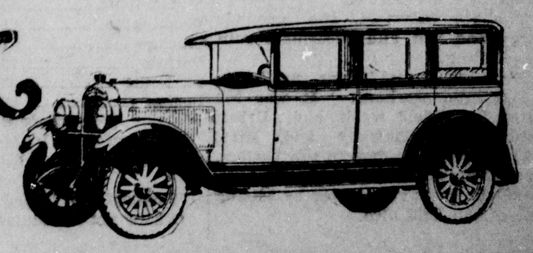

Owners, however, reap the benefit. The Hupmobile Six owner will tell you that his cost of maintenance is so low as to be almost negligible.

He will tell you that he can set out on a tour of a hundred, or a thousand or ten thousand miles, with the complete assurance that his journey will be unmarred by mechanical trouble or annoyance.

For you can drive this Hupmobile Six at express train speed, from sunrise to sunset, in the comforting knowledge that it is engineered and constructed to give such service easily, smoothly, and without straining.

THEIR STRENGTH ONLY DECIDED BY REAL TEST

WHAT THEY WILL DO IN A PINCH IS A MATTER OF GUESS WORK

PECKINPAUGH, LAUDED TO THE SKIES LAST YEAR, COLLAPSED SADLY IN TEST

This is the second of a series of articles written by Henry L. Farrell, United Press sports editor, comparing the strength of the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals. The following article will concern the infields.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Sept. 29.—Considering infields, their strength and what they will do in a pinch is far beyond a paper and a pencil or a perusal of the records. It is something that can be decided only by the test.

Last year when the Washington Senators and the Pittsburgh Pirates were preparing for the world series, the Senators were given a huge edge on the infield because of the pivot at second base between Roger Peckinpaugh, a star short stop, and Bucky Harris, young manager of the team and one of the fastest double play men in the game.

Yet, in the series, Peckinpaugh collapsed after having been voted the most valuable player in the American League.

Peck had much to do with the losing of the series and Glenn Wright, the young Pittsburgh shortstop, who had been rated very much his inferior, was one of the heroes of the series.

If strain had so much effect upon the veteran Peck, who had been through the grind several times, what will the burden do to the young infielders in this coming series? And they are nearly all youngsters!

Rogers Hornsby, Jim Bottomley and Joe Dugan are the only veterans on the two infields and only Dugan has been through a world's series.

Gehrig, Lazzeri and Koenig of the Yankees are in their first season and Thevenow and Bell are also little more than freshmen.

There will have to be a steadying influence and in this respect the Cardinals will have the advantage on account of Hornsby and Bottomley.

Dugan at third base cannot hold down the whole Yankee infield.

Considering the first baseman, St. Louis has a slight edge because Jim Bottomley is more experienced and smarter than Lou Gehrig, the former Columbia university star.

St. Louis has all the advantage at second base where Manager Hornsby will hold the bag. Lazzeri is one of the season's finds, a hard worker, a long and dangerous hitter, but Hornsby is the greatest second baseman in baseball.

At shortstop, Thevenow of the Cardinals and Koenig of the Yankees are youngsters, getting their first shot. They are good fielder's but Koenig is highly erratic.

As the Cardinals outclass the Yankees on second base, so do the Yankees outclass the Cardinals on third base. Joe Dugan is the greatest fielding third baseman in baseball and is still a dangerous batsman. Bell is a good ball player and a tremendous hitter but he cannot be expected to rank with Dugan.

Summing up, the Cardinals seem to have a slight advantage because of the strength around second base.

CARDINALS IN WORKOUT AT STADIUM

By PAUL W. WHITE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Sept. 29. — The St. Louis Cardinals this afternoon had their first workout in the Yankee stadium where they will meet the Yankees in the opening game of the world series Saturday.

The morning workout had been postponed because of the receipt of word, after the team had reached the stadium, that the mother of Rogers Hornsby, Cardinal manager, was seriously ill.

This afternoon, after the Yankees had worked for two hours in the stadium, the Cardinals went out for their first practice, Hornsby remaining at the hotel and Bill Killefer directing the practice.

The day was cold, the grounds soggy and wet and occasional rain was falling.

Ruth hit several "home runs" during a mild workout. It was too damp for infield work and Urban Shocker, Bob Shawkey and Miles Thomas served a few to the batters. Ernie Paschal and Bob Meusel emulated the home run expert by hitting out of the field also.

CHICAGO CITY SERIES IS STARTED

Bloomington, Ind.—Coach Pat Page is shifting his lineup for the De Pauw game Saturday moving Frank Silbey from end where he has played for two years to quarterback. Silbey is known as a cool player and Page believes he will make an ideal field general.

* * *

Champaign, Ill.—Ted Marriner, a regular tackle on last year's varsity, has appeared for practice and greatly bolstered Illini strength in the line. Marriner was unable to report earlier because he was studying for a special examination to become eligible.

* * *

Chicago—Minor injuries to some of his regulars have forced Coach Stagg to slow up his practice sessions of the University of Chicago team which meets the University of Florida Saturday.

* * *

Evanston, Ill.—Coach Thistlethwaite is looking for a punter on his Northwestern squad for early season. Moon Baker, an excellent kicker, is to be kept out of the early games except for a few minutes and the squad is shy on substitute kickers.

* * *

Ann Arbor, Mich.—The Michigan squad is rounding into satisfactory shape for the first game of the season when Oklahoma Aggies will be Ann Arbor visitors. The kicking of Gilbert is especially encouraging.

* * *

Minneapolis—Coach Spears has returned to the sidelines and is personally directing the practice sessions of the Gophers. His first act was to shift his players around both in the line and in the backfield. Shorty Almquist has been temporarily shunted to the second team, making way for Reedel, a sophomore.

* * *

Iowa City, Ia.—Straight line marches will be utilized by the Hawkeyes Saturday when they meet Colorado Teachers, if practice drills this week are any indication. Considerable attention is also being paid to forward passing.

* * *

La Fayette, Ind.—Coach Phelan has given his Purdue charges their last strenuous workout in preparation for the game with the Navy at Annapolis Saturday. Practice yesterday was hampered by a wet field but the Boilermaker squad is in good condition.

* * *

Columbus, O.—Evidence of football enthusiasm at Ohio State came in the fact that 275 freshmen reported for practice yesterday. Only 100 were provided with suits. The varsity meanwhile is centering its preparation for Wittenberg Saturday on an aerial attack.

* * *

South Bend, Ind.—The Notre Dame varsity is having considerable difficulty in solving Minnesota plays, the freshmen going through the varsity for steady gains. Rockne's charges meet Beloit this week end but he is already planning his defense for Minnesota.

* * *

Milwaukee, Wis.—Injuries cause gloom at Marquette university football camp. Three men who have been handling the quarterback position are out. Dick Bader, star kicker, is also out with a bad knee. Lawrence college is to be met at Appleton Saturday.

MOTHER OF THE CARDINAL MANAGER SERIOUSLY ILL

Austin, Tex., Sept. 29—(UP)—Mrs. M. D. Hornsby, mother of Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, is critically ill and little hope is held out for her surviving through the day.

Everett Hornsby, in Tulsa, Okla., a son of Mrs. Hornsby, and former baseball player is enroute to Austin and will arrive this afternoon.

Rogers Hornsby may be summoned home from New York, where his team is practicing for the world's series with the Yankees, today.

The condition of Mrs. M D. Hornsby, mother of Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals was reported unchanged at 1:45 p. m. today.

New York, Sept. 29—(UP)—"Mother's dying wish is that I remain with the team and play through the series and I will follow her wishes," Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, told the United Press today.

The young manager of the National league champions, being notified that his aged mother was not expected to live through the day, called his aunt in Austin, Tex., by telephone and was told that his mother asked as a dying favor that her boy remain with the team.

"If it's God's will that she must die before the series is ended and before I can get to her bedside, they will hold the body for me," Hornsby said in a choking voice. "Mrs. Hornsby is leaving today for Austin."

Morning practice, excepting for a few pitchers, was called off by the St. Louis Cardinals today.

Early in the afternoon Clarence Lloyd, representing the St. Louis club, called newspapermen together and said that despite the wish of Hornsby's mother that he play out the series, Hornsby might reconsider and leave for Austin. Hornsby he said, had not yet definitely made up his mind but that if he did leave he would probably go at 6 p. m. today.

In case Hornsby leaves Bill Killefer will be in charge of the club and Hornsby probably would rejoin it in St. Louis Tuesday, Lloyd said.

Yet, in the series, Peckinpaugh collapsed after having been voted the most valuable player in the American League.

Peck had much to do with the losing of the series and Glenn Wright, the young Pittsburgh shortstop, who had been rated very much his inferior, was one of the heroes of the series.

If strain had so much effect upon the veteran Peck, who had been through the grind several times, what will the burden do to the young infielders in this coming series? And they are nearly all youngsters!

Rogers Hornsby, Jim Bottomley and Joe Dugan are the only veterans on the two infields and only Dugan has been through a world's series.

Gehrig, Lazzeri and Koenig of the Yankees are in their first season and Thevenow and Bell are also little more than freshmen.

There will have to be a steadying influence and in this respect the Cardinals will have the advantage on account of Hornsby and Bottomley.

Dugan at third base cannot hold down the whole Yankee infield.

Considering the first baseman, St. Louis has a slight edge because Jim Bottomley is more experienced and smarter than Lou Gehrig, the former Columbia university star.

St. Louis has all the advantage at second base where Manager Hornsby will hold the bag. Lazzeri is one of the season's finds, a hard worker, a long and dangerous hitter, but Hornsby is the greatest second baseman in baseball.

At shortstop, Thevenow of the Cardinals and Koenig of the Yankees are youngsters, getting their first shot. They are good fielder's but Koenig is highly erratic.

As the Cardinals outclass the Yankees on second base, so do the Yankees outclass the Cardinals on third base. Joe Dugan is the greatest fielding third baseman in baseball and is still a dangerous batsman. Bell is a good ball player and a tremendous hitter but he cannot be expected to rank with Dugan.

Summing up, the Cardinals seem to have a slight advantage because of the strength around second base.

CARDINALS IN WORKOUT AT STADIUM

By PAUL W. WHITE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Sept. 29. — The St. Louis Cardinals this afternoon had their first workout in the Yankee stadium where they will meet the Yankees in the opening game of the world series Saturday.

The morning workout had been postponed because of the receipt of word, after the team had reached the stadium, that the mother of Rogers Hornsby, Cardinal manager, was seriously ill.

This afternoon, after the Yankees had worked for two bours in the stadium, the Cardinals went out for their first practice, Hornsby remaining at the hotel and Bill Killefer directing the practice.

The day was cold, the grounds soggy and wet and occasional rain was falling.

Ruth hit several "home runs" during a mild workout. It was too damp for infield work and Urban Shocker, Bob Shawkey and Miles Thomas served a few to the batters. Ernie Paschal and Bob Meusel emulated the home run expert by hitting out of the field also.

CHICAGO CITY SERIES IS STARTED

ALONG THE SIDELINES

Madison, Wis.—Cheer has been brought to the Wisconsin football camp by the announcement that Rollie Barnum, veteran halfback, has passed eligibility requirements. Coach Little is driving his squad harder each succeeding day and seems to be concentrating on the perfection of an overhead attack.

* * *

Bloomington, Ind.—Coach Pat Page is shifting his lineup for the De Pauw game Saturday moving Frank Silbey from end where he has played for two years to quarterback. Silbey is known as a cool player and Page believes he will make an ideal field general.

* * *

Champaign, Ill.—Ted Marriner, a regular tackle on last year's varsity, has appeared for practice and greatly bolstered Illini strength in the line. Marriner was unable to report earlier because he was studying for a special examination to become eligible.

* * *

Chicago—Minor injuries to some of his regulars have forced Coach Stagg to slow up his practice sessions of the University of Chicago team which meets the University of Florida Saturday.

* * *

Evanston, Ill.—Coach Thistlethwaite is looking for a punter on his Northwestern squad for early season. Moon Baker, an excellent kicker, is to be kept out of the early games except for a few minutes and the squad is shy on substitute kickers.

* * *

Ann Arbor, Mich.—The Michigan squad is rounding into satisfactory shape for the first game of the season when Oklahoma Aggies will be Ann Arbor visitors. The kicking of Gilbert is especially encouraging.

* * *

Minneapolis—Coach Spears has returned to the sidelines and is personally directing the practice sessions of the Gophers. His first act was to shift his players around both in the line and in the backfield. Shorty Almquist has been temporarily shunted to the second team, making way for Reedel, a sophomore.

* * *

Iowa City, Ia.—Straight line marches will be utilized by the Hawkeyes Saturday when they meet Colorado Teachers, if practice drills this week are any indication. Considerable attention is also being paid to forward passing.

* * *

La Fayette, Ind.—Coach Phelan has given his Purdue charges their last strenuous workout in preparation for the game with the Navy at Annapolis Saturday. Practice yesterday was hampered by a wet field but the Boilermaker squad is in good condition.

* * *

Columbus, O.—Evidence of football enthusiasm at Ohio State came in the fact that 275 freshmen reported for practice yesterday. Only 100 were provided with suits. The varsity meanwhile is centering its preparation for Wittenberg Saturday on an aerial attack.

* * *

South Bend, Ind.—The Notre Dame varsity is having considerable difficulty in solving Minnesota plays, the freshmen going through the varsity for steady gains. Rockne's charges meet Beloit this week end but he is already planning his defense for Minnesota.

* * *

Milwaukee, Wis.—Injuries cause gloom at Marquette university football camp. Three men who have been handling the quarterback position are out. Dick Bader, star kicker, is also out with a bad knee. Lawrence college is to be met at Appleton Saturday.

MOTHER OF THE CARDINAL MANAGER SERIOUSLY ILL

Austin, Tex., Sept. 29—(UP)—Mrs. M. D. Hornsby, mother of Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, is critically ill and little hope is held out for her surviving through the day.

Everett Hornsby, in Tulsa, Okla., a son of Mrs. Hornsby, and former baseball player is enroute to Austin and will arrive this afternoon.

Rogers Hornsby may be summoned home from New York, where his team is practicing for the world's series with the Yankees, today.

The condition of Mrs. M D. Hornsby, mother of Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals was reported unchanged at 1:45 p. m. today.

New York, Sept. 29—(UP)—"Mother's dying wish is that I remain with the team and play through the series and I will follow her wishes," Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, told the United Press today.

The young manager of the National league champions, being notified that his aged mother was not expected to live through the day, called his aunt in Austin, Tex., by telephone and was told that his mother asked as a dying favor that her boy remain with the team.

"If it's God's will that she must die before the series is ended and before I can get to her bedside, they will hold the body for me," Hornsby said in a choking voice. "Mrs. Hornsby is leaving today for Austin."

Morning practice, excepting for a few pitchers, was called off by the St. Louis Cardinals today.

Early in the afternoon Clarence Lloyd, representing the St. Louis club, called newspapermen together and said that despite the wish of Hornsby's mother that he play out the series, Hornsby might reconsider and leave for Austin. Hornsby he said, had not yet definitely made up his mind but that if he did leave he would probably go at 6 p. m. today.

In case Hornsby leaves Bill Killefer will be in charge of the club and Hornsby probably would rejoin it in St. Louis Tuesday, Lloyd said.

EXPLAINS WORK OF FEDERAL RESERVE BANK

J. F. Ebersole, Assistant Federal Reserve Agent of Minneapolis, at Rotary Club

GUEST OF GEORGE D. LaBAR

Spoke on Topic of "How a Federal Reserve Bank Serves Member Banks and Public"

J. F. Ebersole, assistant Federal Reserve Agent of the Ninth Federal Reserve District, was the speaker at the Rotary club meeting Tuesday, when George D. LaBar, president of the First National bank of Brainerd presided.

As guests of Mr. LaBar were Mr. Ebersole and many local bankers as well as bankers from neighboring towns of Crow Wing county.

Mr. Ebersole spoke on the topic of "How A Federal Reserve Bank Serves Its Member Banks and the Public."

Mr. Ebersole said in part: "The country is divided geographically into 12 Federal Reserve districts, and in each district there is a Federal Reserve bank, each of them, with the exception of Philadelphia and Boston, having one or more branches. The Minneapolis bank has a branch at Helena, Montana.

Each Federal Reserve bank is chartered for 20 years and is a corporation separate and distinct from the other eleven Reserve banks. It may make contracts, sue and be sued, and it is conducted under the supervision and control of a board of directors who appoint the officers, define their duties, fix the salaries of officers and employes subject to the approval of the Federal Reserve board, and, subject to the review and determination of the Federal Reserve board, establish rates of discount to be charged.

The Federal Reserve board is the supervisory and governing body of the system. It is composed of eight members appointed by the President of the United States for terms of ten years each. The Federal Reserve board does not pass on individual credit applications received by the different Federal Reserve banks; but exercises general supervision to see that the Federal Reserve banks operate in accordance with the provisions of law. Three of the nine directors of each Federal Reserve bank are appointed by the Federal Reserve Board.

All national banks are member banks, and there are many state bank institutions which are members. The number of member banks is approximately one-third of the total number of banks in the United States, but the total member bank resources constitute two thirds of the total banking resources of the United States. Each member bank has subscribed 6 percent of its capital and surplus and paid in 3 percent of its capital and surplus for shares of capital stock in the Federal Reserve bank of which it is a member.

Federal Reserve Bank Operations

Probably the most important services furnished by the Federal Reserve banks are the rediscount of commercial paper, the ability to furnish currency and their open market operations.

Any member bank, large or small, city or country, may ask its Federal Reserve bank to discount for it, that is to buy from a member bank upon the latter's endorsement, certain paper, that is, notes, drafts, etc., which a member bank owns.

Paper to be eligible must be a note or draft, etc., issued or drawn for the purpose of producing, purchasing, carrying or marketing goods, agricultural products or livestock, and it must have a definite maturity at the time of rediscount of not more than ninety days, except that if for an agriculaural purpose, or based upon livestock, its maturity may be not more than nine months.

Negatively stated, it may not (with limited exceptions) be paper covering funds loaned to some other borrower; it may not be paper which represents a permanent or fixed investment, such as land, buildings, machinery, etc.; and it may not be paper covering merely investments, the only exception to this being paper for carrying United States Government bonds. Bankers acceptances based upon import or export transactions, upon domestic shipment of goods, or upon storage of readily marketable staples, may be discounted for member banks, provided the maturities do not exceed ninety days, except in agricultural transactions, when they may mature within six months. Also a member bank may obtain an advance by giving its own note maturing within fifteen days and secured either by Government bonds or by paper which is eligible for discount. The power of the Federal reserve banks to loan to member banks is supplemented by the right which they have to purchase and sell in the open market securities of the United States Government, drafts arising out of commercial transactions, bankers acceptances and certain other obligations. This power provides a means of exercising an influence upon the general credit situation.

The operations of the Minneaoplis Federal Reserve bank during the year 1925 showed the seasonal character of member bank rediscounting. No change of importance took place between the beginning of the year and the first week in April. Spring borrowing began during the week ending April 15, increasing our rediscounts to a high point of nearly 7 millions in the week ending April 29, and practically all of this loan expansion was liquidated by June 24. Fall borrowing began during the week ending July 22, increasing our rediscounts to a peak of 11 and one half millions during the week ending August 19, and this expansion was completely liquidated by October 14. Also in times of emergency, such as in 1920, the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis has been able to expand its total accomodation to member banks both rapidly and considerably. For instance, beginning in the week of March 20 of that year, total accomodation to member banks expanded at the rate of $1,000,000 per day for thirty-six consecutive working days, and continued to expand at a lesser rate until a peak was reached in the week ending October 29 of nearly $113,000,000, of which about $27,000,000 was borrowed from other Federal reserve banks to help carry the load in this district.

Currency and Coin

Large stocks of paper money and coin are held by the Reserve bank as a means of supplying their member banks with till money, and deliveries or shipments of coin and currency are made to member banks on their orders. Shipping and insurance charges on money sent to member banks are borne by the Reserve bank, as well as the same charges on shipments to the Reserve banks when made in accord with current arrangements.

During the year 1925, the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank received and counted more than 110,000 bills on an average for each working day, amounting during the year to nearly $200,000,000 and received and counted more than 30,000 coins per day, amounting to more than 3½ million dollars for the full year.

During 1925, the Federal Reserve Agent and his assistants at Minneapolis and Helena received over $29,000,000 of new Federal reserve notes from the Comptroller of the Currency at Washington and nearly $16,000,000 of fit-for-use notes retired by this bank. As there was need for them, issues were made of new and fit-for-use notes totalling over $44,000,000 during the year, or an average of more than $142,000 per working day.

These Federal Reserve notes provide an element of elasticity in our money in circulation which the country did not enjoy before the establishment of the Federal Reserve System.

The twelve Federal reserve banks are acting virtually as nation-wide clearing houses for their member banks and for such non-member banks as maintain certain balances. Out of town checks deposited with the Federal Reserve bank are sent direct to the places where payable. This direct forwarding and settlement has been accomplished in half the average time which was required to collect out of town checks under old methods. Federal reserve banks are able to collect checks drawn on 90 percent or more of the banks of the country without the payment of the old exchange charge. This constitutes a great saving to commerce.

The Minneapoils Federal Reserve bank in 1925 handled more than 85,000 checks per working day amounting in total value to more than $4,000,000,000 for the year.

Member banks wishing to create balances or pay funds in other parts of the country may do so by means of wire transfers through their Reserve banks without loss of time, and if transfers are for multiples of $100, at no cost to member banks, except where made for the benefit of a designated customer, when a charge is made for the cost of the telegram. An express shipment of $10,000 from Boston to San Francisco would require five days, at the cost of $32.50 for expressage and $8.32 for loss of interest, whereas a wire through the Federal reserve bank would normally take but a few minutes and be without charge to the member bank. These transfers are accomplished through the medium of the Gold Settlement Fund, which is in Washington. Each Federal reserve bank advises the Federal Reserve Board daily by wire of its credits to each of the other eleven banks, and appropriate entries are than made in the books of the Gold Settlement Fund.

During the year 1925, the Minneapolis Federal Bank handled approximately 200 such transfers per working day, the average daily amount being over 8 and ½ million dollars and the total amount for the whole year being more than 2½ billion dollars.

Custody of Securities

The reserve banks maintain custody departments where securities are held for member banks in outlying districts Maturing coupons of such securities are detached and collected, according to instructions.

During the year 1925, the Minneapolis Federal Reserve bank handled approximately 60,000 bonds left for safekeeping and cut nearly 50,000 coupons upon the same.

The fiscal agency department is a great convenience for member banks, as well as for non-member banks and the public in dealings regarding the issue, transfer, exchange, conversion or redemption of United States Government obligations. This department also attends to the duties previously performed by the United States Sub-Treasuries in connection with the exchange and redemption of money for the public.

During the year 1925, the fiscal agency department of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis handled on the average for each working day more than 3,500 coupons and more than 400 issues, redemptions or exchanges of various government securities.

What Federal Reserve Bank Is Not

It is not a government bank. It derives its charter from the United States Government making it hardly more of a government bank than a national bank, which gets its charter from the same source. The government owns no stock in any Federal Reserve bank.

The Reserve banks were not organized for purposes of profit making. The act provides that discount rates shall be fixed with a view to accomodating commerce and business. The essential thing is reasonable accomodation to all member banks and if large profits result, they are incidental.

What becomes of Federal reserve bank profits? The earnings of the Federal reserve bank are used first for the payment of expenses; then there is paid to member banks a six percent dividend; the remaining net earnings are credited to surplus until that equals the subscribed capital stock, and thereafter 10 percent of the net earnings are credited to surplus and the other 90 percent paid to the United States Government as a franchise tax to be used to retire the public debt.

No power is vested in either the Federal Reserve Board of the Federal reserve banks to control the loans which a member bank may or may not make. It follows that a Federal reserve bank may not take the initiative in bringing about an increase in loans by a member bank. The initiative also rests entirely with the member as to whether or not it will rediscount at the Federal Reserve bank, as the Federal reserve bank has no power to compel it to [illegible]

The Federal Reserve System is not a cure-all. It cannot prevent all financial ills or all business depressions. Nothing in the Federal Reserve act imposes any duty or responsibility to attempt to influence prices. Nor does the Reserve bank constitute a sort of a guarantor of deposits of member banks. Membership is a bulwark of strength for any well managed bank. Member banks have in the Federal reserve bank an instituion of unusual strength to which they may turn for extra funds. A well managed bank will have in its possession the kinds of assets upon which it can obtain such funds.

Not A Central Bank

Congress rejected the idea of central reserve bank as tending to a centralized control of individual credit, and created several separate and autonomous institutions as more responsive to local needs and better able to pass intelligently upon local paper offered for discount. While individually regional in their control, collectively the Reserve banks, under the regulations of the Federal Reserve Board, furnish to the country many of the advantages of a central bank, because the board has practically complete power over inter-reserve bank transactions.

For instance in 1920, the member banks in the Ninth Federal Reserve District were not limited in their borrowings to the resources of the Federal Reserve bank of Minneapolis.

Under authority of the Federal Reserve board, funds were borrowed from other Federal reserve banks in increasing amounts beginning in April, raching a peak at the end of October of more than $27,000,000, and constituting nearly one-fourth of the total loans of this bank to its member banks.

SIXTH STREET PAVING NEXT

Intersection at Sixth and Laurel Streets to be Paved Next Week

Ostrand & Hallet, paving contractors, hope to be completed with the paving of Laurel street from the Mississippi River bridge to Fifth street by tonight.

Up to noon today the paving crew had laid 320 feet of paving this morning. This afternoon they had worked past the court house and were on their last lap of that stretch of paving. The width of the paving being laid is 18 feet, the same as the regular highway concrete construction work.

Two blocks of paving on Sixth street commencing at Maple street and working south will likely be laid this week and the paving of the intersection at Sixth and Laurel streets which is now being torn up, carried out the first part of next week.

At the completion of the paving of the intersection, paving work on Sixth street will continue south to meet the other crew working towards Brainerd on Highway No. 27.

Although the weather has been unfavorable the contractors are pushing the paving work on Highway No. 27 and hope to be completed by October 20.

EXPLAINS WORK OF FEDERAL RESERVE BANK

J. F. Ebersole, Assistant Federal Reserve Agent of Minneapolis, at Rotary Club

GUEST OF GEORGE D. LaBAR

Spoke on Topic of "How a Federal Reserve Bank Serves Member Banks and Public"

J. F. Ebersole, assistant Federal Reserve Agent of the Ninth Federal Reserve District, was the speaker at the Rotary club meeting Tuesday, when George D. LaBar, president of the First National bank of Brainerd, presided.

As guests of Mr. LaBar were Mr. Ebersole and many local bankers as well as bankers from neighboring towns of Crow Wing county.

Mr. Ebersole spoke on the topic of "How A Federal Reserve Bank Serves Its Member Banks and the Public."

Mr. Ebersole said in part: "The country is divided geographically into 12 Federal Reserve districts, and in each district there is a Federal Reserve bank, each of them, with the exception of Philadelphia and Boston, having one or more branches. The Minneapolis bank has a branch at Helena, Montana.

Each Federal Reserve bank is chartered for 20 years and is a corporation separate and distinct from the other eleven Reserve banks. It may make contracts, sue and be sued, and it is conducted under the supervision and control of a board of directors who appoint the officers, define their duties, fix the salaries of officers and employes subject to the approval of the Federal Reserve board, and, subject to the review and determination of the Federal Reserve board, establish rates of discount to be charged.

The Federal Reserve board is the supervisory and governing body of the system. It is composed of eight members appointed by the President of the United States for terms of ten years each. The Federal Reserve board does not pass on individual credit applications received by the different Federal Reserve banks; but exercises general supervision to see that the Federal Reserve banks operate in accordance with the provisions of law. Three of the nine directors of each Federal Reserve bank are appointed by the Federal Reserve Board.

All national banks are member banks, and there are many state bank institutions which are members. The number of member banks is approximately one-third of the total number of banks in the United States, but the total member bank resources constitute two thirds of the total banking resources of the United States. Each member bank has subscribed 6 percent of its capital and surplus and paid in 3 percent of its capital and surplus for shares of capital stock in the Federal Reserve bank of which it is a member.

Federal Reserve Bank Operations

Probably the most important services furnished by the Federal Reserve banks are the rediscount of commercial paper, the ability to furnish currency and their open market operations.

Any member bank, large or small, city or country, may ask its Federal Reserve bank to discount for it, that is to buy from a member bank upon the latter's endorsement, certain paper, that is, notes, drafts, etc., which a member bank owns.

Paper to be eligible must be a note or draft, etc., issued or drawn for the purpose of producing, purchasing, carrying or marketing goods, agricultural products or livestock, and it must have a definite maturity at the time of rediscount of not more than ninety days, except that if for an agriculaural purpose, or based upon livestock, its maturity may be not more than nine months.

Negatively stated, it may not (with limited exceptions) be paper covering funds loaned to some other borrower; it may not be paper which represents a permanent or fixed investment, such as land, buildings, machinery, etc.; and it may not be paper covering merely investments, the only exception to this being paper for carrying United States Government bonds. Bankers acceptances based upon import or export transactions, upon domestic shipment of goods, or upon storage of readily marketable staples, may be discounted for member banks, provided the maturities do not exceed ninety days, except in agricultural transactions, when they may mature within six months. Also a member bank may obtain an advance by giving its own note maturing within fifteen days and secured either by Government bonds or by paper which is eligible for discount. The power of the Federal reserve banks to loan to member banks is supplemented by the right which they have to purchase and sell in the open market securities of the United States Government, drafts arising out of commercial transactions, bankers acceptances and certain other obligations. This power provides a means of exercising an influence upon the general credit situation.

The operations of the Minneaoplis Federal Reserve bank during the year 1925 showed the seasonal character of member bank rediscounting. No change of importance took place between the beginning of the year and the first week in April. Spring borrowing began during the week ending April 15, increasing our rediscounts to a high point of nearly 7 millions in the week ending April 29, and practically all of this loan expansion was liquidated by June 24. Fall borrowing began during the week ending July 22, increasing our rediscounts to a peak of 11 and one half millions during the week ending August 19, and this expansion was completely liquidated by October 14. Also in times of emergency, such as in 1920, the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis has been able to expand its total accomodation to member banks both rapidly and considerably. For instance, beginning in the week of March 20 of that year, total accomodation to member banks expanded at the rate of $1,000,000 per day for thirty-six consecutive working days, and continued to expand at a lesser rate until a peak was reached in the week ending October 29 of nearly $113,000,000, of which about $27,000,000 was borrowed from other Federal reserve banks to help carry the load in this district.

Currency and Coin

Large stocks of paper money and coin are held by the Reserve bank as a means of supplying their member banks with till money, and deliveries or shipments of coin and currency are made to member banks on their orders. Shipping and insurance charges on money sent to member banks are borne by the Reserve bank, as well as the same charges on shipments to the Reserve banks when made in accord with current arrangements.

During the year 1925, the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank received and counted more than 110,000 bills on an average for each working day, amounting during the year to nearly $200,000,000 and received and counted more than 30,000 coins per day, amounting to more than 3½ million dollars for the full year.

During 1925, the Federal Reserve Agent and his assistants at Minneapolis and Helena received over $29,000,000 of new Federal reserve notes from the Comptroller of the Currency at Washington and nearly $16,000,000 of fit-for-use notes retired by this bank. As there was need for them, issues were made of new and fit-for-use notes totalling over $44,000,000 during the year, or an average of more than $142,000 per working day.

These Federal Reserve notes provide an element of elasticity in our money in circulation which the country did not enjoy before the establishment of the Federal Reserve System.

The twelve Federal reserve banks are acting virtually as nation-wide clearing houses for their member banks and for such non-member banks as maintain certain balances. Out of town checks deposited with the Federal Reserve bank are sent direct to the places where payable. This direct forwarding and settlement has been accomplished in half the average time which was required to collect out of town checks under old methods. Federal reserve banks are able to collect checks drawn on 90 percent or more of the banks of the country without the payment of the old exchange charge. This constitutes a great saving to commerce.

The Minneapoils Federal Reserve bank in 1925 handled more than 85,000 checks per working day amounting in total value to more than $4,000,000,000 for the year.

Member banks wishing to create balances or pay funds in other parts of the country may do so by means of wire transfers through their Reserve banks without loss of time, and if transfers are for multiples of $100, at no cost to member banks, except where made for the benefit of a designated customer, when a charge is made for the cost of the telegram. An express shipment of $10,000 from Boston to San Francisco would require five days, at the cost of $32.50 for expressage and $8.32 for loss of interest, whereas a wire through the Federal reserve bank would normally take but a few minutes and be without charge to the member bank. These transfers are accomplished through the medium of the Gold Settlement Fund, which is in Washington. Each Federal reserve bank advises the Federal Reserve Board daily by wire of its credits to each of the other eleven banks, and appropriate entries are than made in the books of the Gold Settlement Fund.

During the year 1925, the Minneapolis Federal Bank handled approximately 200 such transfers per working day, the average daily amount being over 8 and ½ million dollars and the total amount for the whole year being more than 2½ billion dollars.

Custody of Securities

The reserve banks maintain custody departments where securities are held for member banks in outlying districts. Maturing coupons of such securities are detached and collected, according to instructions.

During the year 1925, the Minneapolis Federal Reserve bank handled approximately 60,000 bonds left for safekeeping and cut nearly 50,000 coupons upon the same.

The fiscal agency department is a great convenience for member banks, as well as for non-member banks and the public in dealings regarding the issue, transfer, exchange, conversion or redemption of United States Government obligations. This department also attends to the duties previously performed by the United States Sub-Treasuries in connection with the exchange and redemption of money for the public.

During the year 1925, the fiscal agency department of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis handled on the average for each working day more than 3,500 coupons and more than 400 issues, redemptions or exchanges of various government securities.

What Federal Reserve Bank Is Not

It is not a government bank. It derives its charter from the United States Government making it hardly more of a government bank than a national bank, which gets its charter from the same source. The government owns no stock in any Federal Reserve bank.

The Reserve banks were not organized for purposes of profit making. The act provides that discount rates shall be fixed with a view to accomodating commerce and business. The essential thing is reasonable accomodation to all member banks and if large profits result, they are incidental.

What becomes of Federal reserve bank profits? The earnings of the Federal reserve bank are used first for the payment of expenses; then there is paid to member banks a six percent dividend; the remaining net earnings are credited to surplus until that equals the subscribed capital stock, and thereafter 10 percent of the net earnings are credited to surplus and the other 90 percent paid to the United States Government as a franchise tax to be used to retire the public debt.

No power is vested in either the Federal Reserve Board of the Federal reserve banks to control the loans which a member bank may or may not make. It follows that a Federal reserve bank may not take the initiative in bringing about an increase in loans by a member bank. The initiative also rests entirely with the member as to whether or not it will rediscount at the Federal Reserve bank, as the Federal reserve bank has no power to compel it to [illegible].

The Federal Reserve System is not a panacea. It cannot prevent all financial ills or all business depressions. Nothing in the Federal Reserve act imposes any duty or responsibility to attempt to influence prices. Nor does the Reserve bank constitute a sort of a guarantor of deposits of member banks. Membership is a bulwark of strength for any well managed bank. Member banks have in the Federal reserve bank an institution of unusual strength to which they may turn for extra funds. A well managed bank will have in its possession the kinds of assets upon which it can obtain such funds.

Not A Central Bank

Congress rejected the idea of central reserve bank as tending to a centralized control of individual credit, and created several separate and autonomous institutions as more responsive to local needs and better able to pass intelligently upon local paper offered for discount. While individually regional in their control, collectively the Reserve banks, under the regulations of the Federal Reserve Board, furnish to the country many of the advantages of a central bank, because the board has practically complete power over inter-reserve bank transactions.

For instance in 1920, the member banks in the Ninth Federal Reserve District were not limited in their borrowings to the resources of the Federal Reserve bank of Minneapolis.

Under authority of the Federal Reserve board, funds were borrowed from other Federal reserve banks in increasing amounts beginning in April, raching a peak at the end of October of more than $27,000,000, and constituting nearly one-fourth of the total loans of this bank to its member banks.

Hope and Window Decorations

By JOHN EVANS

(Copyright.)

"IT'S exactly what I've always wanted to do," exclaimed Hope Chandler when she had been called to the office of the department store where she had been working. The manager had offered her an opportunity to try her hand at window decorating.

"You show some aptitude in that line and we like to give our employees a chance in their own direction. It is better for us—and better for you," said the manager.

The beginners in this line were usually given a chance to try their ability on the small windows that faced the underground arcade leading from one street to another.

"I'm going to do a perfume window tomorrow," she cried, gladly, to one of her co-workers.

"Oh—for the big drug sale?" asked her friend. "Great! Step on it, kid. You're coming on, all right."

She worked hard on the window that would display all the varieties of perfume that the shop was to have on sale. She laughed at the silly names on the fragrant powders and essences and yet she knew that in the marketing of this kind of ware there was much in a name. "Kiss Me" and "Flowers of Love" sold by their names, no doubt.

She was arranging a pyramid of ornately formed bottles in a lower corner of the window when the top bottle tumbled off its precarious perch. Fortunately, it did not break, but it tapped rather sharply the plate-glass pane.

"Dear me—how lucky!" breathed Hope as she bent to see if the pane had been scratched.

As she did so, she observed, for the first time, the slender figure of a young man dressing a window opposite her in the narrow tunneled passageway. He had heard the knock on the glass and was looking at her. He, too, had seen Hope for the first time.

Hope was embarrassed. Did he think she had tapped at the window to attract his attention? She continued her work with only an occasional surreptitious glance at the man in the window. She had seen enough of his face to know she liked him.

He was arranging cigars, cigarettes, tubes, pipes, ash trays. Hope had never seen him in the store. She wondered who he was.

That night when she left the shop she saw him swinging along the street. She liked him the more for his easy, graceful manner of moving.

The next morning she looked at his window. It was as artistic as anyone could have made it and there was something about the colorful schemes in which he had arranged the slender cigarette holders with the trays that matched them that gave the casual eye a sense of harmony. Hope decided that the young man was an artist.

Without seeming pointed in her purpose, she inquired about some of the other window dressers.

"Oh—you know we are having a good deal of work done just now by students from the commercial art school uptown. They want the practical experience and we—well, we get it done free, gratis, for nothing," a fellow worker told her. "The lad that did the cigar window yesterday in the subway store is one of them. Notice it?"

Nearly a month later she was standing looking at the first outside window she had ever been assigned to. She had put a great deal of thought and effort on it and had raised the shade on a stunning rainbow window of silks arranged according to the new science of color. It was an original idea. She had taken groups of colors from a book on this subject and had made charts in the window and labeled them as such so that passersby might choose and study their own colors, their influence, vibrations, etc. The window was attracting much attention.

"Pardon me," said a voice at her elbow.

"O—" said Hope, looking up into the face of the young artist.

"I must congratulate you on this window," he was saying. "I have asked about it from the management and they told me you were outside, now, they believed and they gave me permission to tell you in person."

"You—you like it?" asked Hope, timidly.

"It's splendid, both in conception and execution," he said.

Hope was adding admiration for his deep, rich tones to the already sufficiently large list of things she liked about this man.

"I am a director in a commercial art school and am, therefore, perhaps, not an ordinary judge of such work. I do an occasional window just to demonstrate to the students that it is an absorbing profession and one that is far from insignificant—even in its early stages."

"Yes—I saw you in the subway windows, did I not? I had dropped a perfume bottle and it tapped the glass. I—"

"Yes—I knew you were embarrassed because you thought I believed you had done it deliberately."

Then they both laughed.

It was not three months later that they admitted to each other that the perfume bottle, toppling from its pinnacle, had been merely an instrument of fate tapping to them both to take notice.

Presidency is Hazardous

Being President of Haiti has been a lively and hazardous occupation for many years, the history of that little republic showing 17 Presidents have been ousted by revolution, two were murdered, five died in office under suspicious circumstances, one perished in an explosion, one was poisoned, another died of violence.

But the epidemic subsided in 1915, when the United States stepped in to help establish and develop orderly government, and the recent presidential election, the twenty-seventh to be held, passed off without a revolution, without a murder, and the chance for a President to live out his term and end his days in peace have been vastly improved with the United States marines helping hold the lid down.

Delivery Planes in Alps

Austrians are using airplanes for transporting supplies to the almost inaccessible regions in the higher Alps. In a test building material was just thrown overboard as the planes approached the place as near as safety justified. Food supplies were thrown out in padded sacks. Even beer in bottles was floated down in slings attached to small parachutes. Recently a Tyrol plane was revictualing an isolated mountain hut near Kuehtal. The motor suddenly stopped and the pilot was forced to pancake on the tops of some pines. He was badly injured. The plane was damaged and had to be taken apart and carried down the mountain by mules.—Chicago News.

What We Talk About

Men's most frequent conversational topics were: Business, 40 per cent; sports and amusements, 15 per cent; talk about other men, among themselves, 12 per cent. The leading topic of women's conversation was men, 22 per cent; clothes came in for 19 per cent, and, among themselves, about other women, 15 per cent.

The Perfect Saleswoman

Secretary of Labor Davis said at the National Electric Light association's Atlantic City convention:

"To make perfect lighting universal the electric light companies' salesmen would have to be as persuasive as the Paint Rock housewife.

"The salesman, you know, called on a housewife to sell her a jar of freckle remover and, by George, before the fellow got away the woman had sold him two quart jars of freckle remover of her own make."

STOCKS IN UNCERTAIN TONE

New York, Sept. 29.—(UP)—Stocks dragged through another day of uncertainty as a result of heavy requisitions for money in connection with October 1 settlements. Banks called approximately $15,000,000 in loans and these withdrawals were responsible for considerable selling of stocks carried on margin.

Consequently price movements on the stock exchange were extremely nervous and some sharp breaks occurred in special issues like Warner Brothers, American Linseed, Ward Baking B, Electric Refrigeration and Atlantic Gulf and West Indies.

For the most part pivotal issues show good results and their failure to give ground induced a covering movement in the late afternoon creating a better tone in the general list.

Hope and Window Decorations

By JOHN EVANS

(Copyright.)

"IT'S exactly what I've always wanted to do," exclaimed Hope Chandler when she had been called to the office of the department store where she had been working. The manager had offered her an opportunity to try her hand at window decorating.

"You show some aptitude in that line and we like to give our employees a chance in their own direction. It is better for us—and better for you," said the manager.

The beginners in this line were usually given a chance to try their ability on the small windows that faced the underground arcade leading from one street to another.

"I'm going to do a perfume window tomorrow," she cried, gladly, to one of her co-workers.

"Oh—for the big drug sale?" asked her friend. "Great! Step on it, kid. You're coming on, all right."

She worked hard on the window that would display all the varieties of perfume that the shop was to have on sale. She laughed at the silly names on the fragrant powders and essences and yet she knew that in the marketing of this kind of ware there was much in a name. "Kiss Me" and "Flowers of Love" sold by their names, no doubt.

She was arranging a pyramid of ornately formed bottles in a lower corner of the window when the top bottle tumbled off its precarious perch. Fortunately, it did not break, but it tapped rather sharply the plate-glass pane.

"Dear me—how lucky!" breathed Hope as she bent to see if the pane had been scratched.

As she did so, she observed, for the first time, the slender figure of a young man dressing a window opposite her in the narrow tunneled passageway. He had heard the knock on the glass and was looking at her. He, too, had seen Hope for the first time.

Hope was embarrassed. Did he think she had tapped at the window to attract his attention? She continued her work with only an occasional surreptitious glance at the man in the window. She had seen enough of his face to know she liked him.

He was arranging cigars, cigarettes, tubes, pipes, ash trays. Hope had never seen him in the store. She wondered who he was.

That night when she left the shop she saw him swinging along the street. She liked him the more for his easy, graceful manner of moving.

The next morning she looked at his window. It was as artistic as anyone could have made it and there was something about the colorful schemes in which he had arranged the slender cigarette holders with the trays that matched them that gave the casual eye a sense of harmony. Hope decided that the young man was an artist.

Without seeming pointed in her purpose, she inquired about some of the other window dressers.

"Oh—you know we are having a good deal of work done just now by students from the commercial art school uptown. They want the practical experience and we—well, we get it done free, gratis, for nothing," a fellow worker told her. "The lad that did the cigar window yesterday in the subway store is one of them. Notice it?"

Nearly a month later she was standing looking at the first outside window she had ever been assigned to. She had put a great deal of thought and effort on it and had raised the shade on a stunning rainbow window of silks arranged according to the new science of color. It was an original idea. She had taken groups of colors from a book on this subject and had made charts in the window and labeled them as such so that passersby might choose and study their own colors, their influence, vibrations, etc. The window was attracting much attention.

"Pardon me," said a voice at her elbow.

"O—" said Hope, looking up into the face of the young artist.

"I must congratulate you on this window," he was saying. "I have asked about it from the management and they told me you were outside, now, they believed and they gave me permission to tell you in person."

"You—you like it?" asked Hope, timidly.

"It's splendid, both in conception and execution," he said.

Hope was adding admiration for his deep, rich tones to the already sufficiently large list of things she liked about this man.

"I am a director in a commercial art school and am, therefore, perhaps, not an ordinary judge of such work. I do an occasional window just to demonstrate to the students that it is an absorbing profession and one that is far from insignificant—even in its early stages."

"Yes—I saw you in the subway windows, did I not? I had dropped a perfume bottle and it tapped the glass. I—"

"Yes—I knew you were embarrassed because you thought I believed you had done it deliberately."

Then they both laughed.

It was not three months later that they admitted to each other that that perfume bottle, toppling from its pinnacle, had been merely an instrument of fate tapping to them both to take notice.

Presidency Is Hazardous

Being President of Haiti has been a lively and hazardous occupation for many years, the history of that little republic showing 17 Presidents have been ousted by revolution, two were murdered, five died in office under suspicious circumstances, one perished in an explosion, one was poisoned, another died of violence.

But the epidemic subsided in 1915, when the United States stepped in to help establish and develop orderly government, and the recent presidential election, the twenty-seventh to be held, passed off without a revolution, without a murder, and the chance for a President to live out his term and end his days in peace have been vastly improved with the United States marines helping hold the lid down.

Delivery Planes in Alps

Austrians are using airplanes for transporting supplies to the almost inaccessible regions in the higher Alps. In a test building material was just thrown overboard as the planes approached the place as near as safety justified. Food supplies were thrown out in padded sacks. Even beer in bottles was floated down in slings attached to small parachutes. Recently a Tyrol plane was revictualing an isolated mountain hut near Kuehtal. The motor suddenly stopped and the pilot was forced to pancake on the tops of some pines. He was badly injured. The plane was damaged and had to be taken apart and carried down the mountain by mules.—Chicago News.

What We Talk About

An analysis of 500 conversations overheard in Columbus, Ohio, on the street, at games, and in theater lobbies, barber shops and churches, is reported in the Journal of Comparative Psychology.

Men's most frequent conversational topics were: Business, 40 per cent; sports and amusements, 15 per cent; talk about other men, among themselves, 12 per cent. The leading topic of women's conversation was men, 22 per cent; clothes came in for 19 per cent, and, among themselves, about other women, 15 per cent.

The Perfect Saleswoman

Secretary of Labor Davis said at the National Electric Light association's Atlantic City convention:

"To make perfect lighting universal the electric light companies' salesmen would have to be as persuasive as the Paint Rock housewife.

"The salesman, you know, called on a housewife to sell her a jar of freckle remover and, by George, before the fellow got away the woman had sold him two quart jars of freckle remover of her own make."
